23 Ethiopian Aids Also Are Victims

By the United Press.

Stockholm, Dec. 31.—A special police guard was thrown around the Italian legation tonight to prevent demonstrations against the killing of nine Swedish Red Cross men by Italian bombers in Ethiopia.

Chief of Police Baeckman announced he would use all means to prevent terrorism outside the legation.

Sweden was horror-struck by the bombing, of which it learned in extra editions of newspapers and by radio.

Consul to Search.

Public expressions of bitter resentment against Italians were heard in the streets. Italian Minister Marquis Palermo kept within the barred doors of his legation.

Evening radio programs, scheduled to have been devoted to gay New Year's Eve cabaret music, were given over to classical works in reverence to the Swedes who died in a humanitarian enterprise in a far-off land.

Dr. Kurt Hanner, Swedish Consul at Addis Ababa, telegraphed: "Received news Hylander's (Dr. Fride Hylander, commander of the bombed medical unit) ambulance destroyed Italian bombs. Fear serious loss human life. Leaving with Von Rosen (Swedish pilot) to look for survivors."

Subsequently press dispatches told complete story of the death of nine—all the European members of the expedition except Dr. Hylander, who was wounded.

Field Hospital Bombed.

Addis Ababa, Dec. 31 (U.P.).—Red Cross officials indignantly announced today that Italian aerial bombers have blown up a Red Cross field hospital near Dolo, on the southern frontier, killing nine Swedes and 23 Ethiopian assistants.

The only survivor, Dr. Fride Hylander, commander of the unit, will be brought here by airplane for treatment of slight wounds and to supply evidence for a strong protest to the International Red Cross at Geneva.

Officials said the tents were marked clearly with large Red Cross insignia—just as was the Seventh Day Adventist hospital at Dessye, which Premier Benito Mussolini's airmen showered with incendiary bombs several weeks ago.

The Swedish consul, Dr. Kurt Hanner, who also is head of the Imperial Hospital, declared: "This is the most outrageous and most barbarous act imaginable. It seems almost as if the Italians deliberately bomb Red Cross units at the slightest opportunity."

British Investigate.

The British legation, which handles Swedish interests in Ethiopia, immediately began investigation. International repercussions are believed inevitable.

Red Cross headquarters also received a hurry call for "as many gas masks as possible" to be sent by airplane to Daggah Bur, fortified Ethiopian town in the upper Fafan Valley, which was bombarded without damage yesterday.

Officials believed the appeal indicated the Italians already had gassed Daggah Bur, or were expected to do so momentarily.

The blasted Red Cross camp was pitched about 20 miles from Dolo, center of Gen. Rodolfo Graziani's recent military concentrations, at the intersection of the borders of Ethiopia, Italian Somaliland and British Kenya.

The tents were pitched at sufficient distance from the army of Ras Desta Demtu, son-in-law of Em-

Flier-Author Lost

Paris, Dec. 31 (AP).—Grave fears were held tonight for the safety of Antoine de Sainte Xupery, flier and author of "Night Flight," unreported for two days in an attempt to set a record for a flight between Paris and Saigon, French Indo-China.

The flier and his mechanic, seeking a 500,000 franc (about $35,000) air ministry prize, have not been sighted since leaving Benghazi, Libya. Parisians feared they may have met the fate of the fliers Pharabod and Klein, who were killed in an Egyptian crash during a Paris-Madagascar record attempt six years ago.

France, Britain To Act Jointly In Arms 'Deals'

Agree Not to Move Singly for Land or Air Pact With Germany.

By the United Press.

Paris, Dec. 31.—France and Britain closed a critical year tonight with an agreement that neither would make a single-handed deal with Germany on land or air forces.

The breach in Franco-British relations caused by the Anglo-German naval agreement, allowing the Nazis to build up to 35 per cent of British sea strength by categories in violation of the Versailles Treaty, thus finally is healed. Britain promises not to do it again.

The two countries also decided to consult for the purpose of inviting Germany early in January to reexamine the question of an arms limitation conference. Germany walked out of the world disarmament conference at Geneva and quit the League in 1933 because the powers refused to recognize her right to defense weapons.

Method Not Decided.

It has not been decided whether the French and British Ambassadors at Berlin shall make simultaneous diplomatic advances to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler or whether British Ambassador Sir Eric Phipps shall speak for both.

Unofficially Hitler has been sounded out by Phipps and is reported by some sources to have said Germany would insist upon having the largest single air force on the continent before talking limitation.

France intends to expose that contention. France today has the largest fighting air force in the world—although no Frenchman, however optimistic, will pretend she has the best or most modern.

The French have about 2,600 fighting planes to Germany's 1,000, but the latter are all modern—built secretly during the last four years in violation of the Versailles treaty ending the World War, which said Germany could have no air force.

Russia Is Mystery.

Behind both air fleets is the mystery of Russia. No one knows how many ships the soviets possess, although a recent French unofficial estimate said 4,300, divided between Europe and Asia, with 24 brigades of aviators.

These statistics said Russia had 1,500 bombers last January 1, but that the second five-year plan provides for construction of 20,000 airplane motors and 8,000 planes, of which 3,000 are to be bombers.

French military information says Russia will have 62 air regiments and 5,000 planes in 1936. By the end of 1937 the same military sources say Russia will have trained 1,000,000 pilots, 500,000 observers and 500,000 glider fliers.

In view of the Russian menace to European skies, the French and British believe Hitler will be willing to agree to a limitation plan which can be extended to Russia. It is doubtful, however, whether any power will be willing to limit its air force until Russia does the same.

France also plans to renew her demand for the abolition of "professional shock troops"—the substitution of limited conscription for professional permanent soldiers.

Happy New Year!

Capital Greets Dawn of 1936 In Gay and Noisy Celebrations

Night Clubs, Hotels and Private Homes Scenes of Hilarious Revelry as Old Year Passes Out and New, Presaging Prosperity, Arrives.

The hands of the clock embraced, and Washington saluted the year 1936 with a gusto not seen hereabouts since pre-depression days. The celebration was noisy, hilarious and exceedingly spirituous.

It was 1935, with its upswing in business and its fatter Federal payroll, that made it all possible. But 1935 was only a foggy memory to Washington's half million last night and this morning. Nineteen-thirty-six was going to be even better.

So they spent more, drank more, and whooped it up more than they had since the golden years of '28 and '29.

Hotels, Clubs Crowded.

Night clubs, hotels and private clubs all were crowded, and one could hardly knock on an apartment door wtihout running into a party.

Not only Washington, but all America hailed the New Year in a big way, and it was estimated that $10,000,000 was tossed away on merriment.

In New York and in most major cities, curfew hours on liquor were lifted, but here the last drink disappeared from night clubs at 2 a. m.

There were loud demands for "just one more," but waiters were adamant.

The revelers swung out of clubs and hotels to find the streets slushy and the skies loaded with clouds. Tonight, according to the Weather Bureau, these clouds will douse Washington with snow or rain.

The first 1936 baby arrived in Washington at one minute after last midnight. The parents are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gray and the baby was born in Freedmen's Hospital. The child is a boy. Mr. and Mrs. Gray live in Lakeland, Md.

Holy Day of Obligation.

At 2 o'clock this morning, the Church of the Immaculate Conception was well crowded with men and women who decided to turn from gayety to reverence. Other masses were to be held from 5 a. m. to 11 a. m., with a high mass at 12:15 p. m.

All Catholic churches will observe this as a Holy Day of Obligation, the feast of the Circumcision.

Many Washingtonians, who felt that the New Year was a time for prayer rather than revelry, attended the traditional watch-night services.

President Roosevelt spent the night at the White House with members of his family. Unlike his predecessors, he will not hold a reception for the public today. He will devote his time, instead, to working on his message to Congress.

Government employes were dismissed at 1 p. m. the better to prepare for the night's celebration. Their superiors, in several instances, were content to see 1935 out and 1936 in "quietly." Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson said he attends only two parties a year and neither falls on December 31. Postmaster General Farley went to New York to join his family. The Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes planned to spend the evening at home.

The Capital Transit Co. provided extraordinary service on all its street car and bus lines for the accommodation of late homegoers. Taxicabs also were heavily taxed in handling the demands of riders, both going and coming.

Observance of New Year's will be carried over today in the form of church services, open house at various institutions and in other ways.

Y. M. C. A. to Celebrate.

A diversified program of entertainment has been arranged by the Y. M. C. A., Eighteenth and G streets northwest, to celebrate its annual open-house today. Several thousand members and guests are expected to witness the games, concert, dramatic play, spelling bee and other events between morning and midnight.

Contests in the boys' department will begin in the morning. Opening sports event in the men's gymnasium is the 2-mile run, scheduled for 2 p. m. Swimming pool features include a fancy diving exhibition, water polo game and life-saving demonstration.

British Plane Lost With All on Board

By the United Press.

London (Wednesday), Jan. 1.—Croydon Airdrome officials announced early today that an Imperial Airways flying boat was lost in the Mediterranean late yesterday with a crew of four and an unknown number of passengers.

Officials said the H. M. S. Brilliant located the wreckage of the airliner City of Khartoum at 11:55 p. m. yesterday.

The naval vessel had rescued the pilot of the plane at 11:20 p. m. in the water about a mile from the harbor of Alexandria, Egypt.

Immediately after the news of the disaster reached Alexandria, airdrome officials said, a British destroyer and another Imperial Airways plane, the Hannibal, sped to the scene to search for possible survivors.

The City of Khartoum left Mirabella, Crete, at noon, G. M. T. (7 a. m. E. S. T.) Tuesday, officials announced.

At 5:20 p. m., they said, the plane's radio operator messaged that he was winding up his aerial as the ship neared Alexandria.

Relief Officials, Business See Brighter Year

U. S. Commerce Chamber and A. F. of L. Join in Optimism.

By Felix Bruner.

Optimistic predictions for 1936 came yesterday from business, labor, and even from national relief headquarters. For the first time since 1929, all elements seemed united in their feeling that the New Year will bring happier nad more prosperous conditions.

"The strength of the United States is again asserting itself in unmistakable and characteristic ways," Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said.

"There are now manifold statistical evidences of progress. They are the record of accomplishments in the face of handicaps, often imposed vicariously. With all of the evidence of new strength and vigor cumulative in their effects, we can depend upon continuation into the New Year of the improved conditions of recent months."

Warns Against New Burdens.

Sibley said that how far these forces will carry depends almost entirely upon the burdens which are imposed upon business. Voicing the feeling that has been expressed frequently by business organizations, he said that any lessening of the loads which business enterprise is now asked to carry will add to the steady progress in public and individual welfare.

An even more cheerful prediction came from William Green,

Savants View Goddard Rocket As Man-Made Meteor of Space

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 31.—The space rocket, which Dr. Robert H. Goddard is building on the mesas of New Mexico, was hailed by his fellow scientists here today as solving the problem of going up perhaps 100 miles and possibly leaving the earth entirely to become a "free meteor."

They saw for the first time a motion picture of this long, lean object driving straight upward with a stubby apron of continuous flame at its tail, and flashes like exploding shells far back in its wake, where occasional unburned bits of its fuel exploded harmlessly.

Modest Dr. Goddard would say only that he is making a rocket to sound the earth's atmosphere at heights more than now possible. But colleagues who have worked with him for years told the assembled scientists he had solved the problem of rocket flight and that the dazzling heights heretofore a more or less wild dream can be predicted safely in the near future.

Dr. Goddard showed the motion pictures and described his rocket at a meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. His picture closed with a flight of 700 feet at 500 miles an hour.

The rocket shown today is 12 feet long, 9 inches in diameter, weighs 80 pounds empty and carries 60 pounds of fuel. This fuel is gasoline and liquid oxygen, which are mixed by the driving power of compressed nitrogen.

This rocket, Dr. Goddard explained, solved two of the three problems of rocket flight: First, a continuous flow of firing energy; second, direction—flight in an almost straight line made possible by a "mechanical brain," a tyroscope no bigger than a large watch.

The remaining problem, he said, is building a lighter rocket which can carry more fuel. He said this third problem was dependent to a large extent on money for experiments with materials.

A reduction of weight by one half, he said, will more than double the height to which such a rocket can be fired with present fuel.

This rocket will travel 700 miles an hour. To leave earth entirely it would have to go seven times faster.

Dr. Goddard uses an automatic parachute to bring his present rocket back to earth without damage. He pointed out the gyroscope which controls flight direction, although it is one of the most delicate mechanisms known, is never

Roosevelt Will Deliver '36 Message to Congress In Person Friday Night

Announcement of Plans Comes as a Surprise to House Leaders.

Wilson Demand for War Last Such Personal Appearance.

By Robert C. Albright.

President Roosevelt will personally deliver his message to Congress in a dramatic night appearance before both houses assembled on Friday at 9 o'clock, Congressional leaders were belatedly informed yesterday.

This unprecedented course, with no accompanying explanation, caused a hurried conference of both minority and majority leaders in Vice President Garner's room, within a few minutes after definite word of the decision reached the Capitol at 5 p. m. yesterday.

Speaker Joseph W. Byrns announced the procedure when the conference broke up an hour later. Even before word of the plan was received by leaders, radio broadcasting officials were on the Capitol scene to make arrangements.

Rules Are Obstacle.

Republicans at once took the view that the President's night appearance was designed to reach a larger radio audience than would usually tune in on a mid-day broadcast, and serve the three-fold purpose of a message to Congress, a "fireside chat" with the Nation, and the opening gun in the approaching Presidential campaign.

An important stumbling block still remained in the path of this strategy, however—the rigid rules of the House which permit adjournment of the body only until noon the next day, unless unanimous consent is given, or the rules are suspended by a two-thirds vote.

A prominent Democratic spokesman said it is not altogether impossible that one dissenting voice might prevent unanimous consent, or that two-thirds of the membership might refuse to return for a 9 o'clock session. He said it was improbable this would happen however.

Snell Confident.

This House parliamentary barrier was discussed in detail at the conference called in the Vice President's office. Besides Speaker Byrns and Vice President Garner, Senate Republican Leader Charles L. McNary and House Minority Leader Bertrand H. Snell were present.

It was learned McNary and Snell agreed to make no objection, but neither Snell nor the Speaker could speak for the entire House, one member of which could throw the whole issue into the House Rules Committee by two words, "I object."

"I think the Speaker will be able to work something out," Snell said on leaving the Vice President's office.

The Senate rules are more flexible, and it is not expected any great difficulty will be encountered in that chamber.

Leaders admitted the request for a night session took them entirely by surprise. No President has ever made such a request since Woodrow Wilson appeared before a joint session of Congress on the eve of declaration of war in 1917.

Although both McNary and the House minority leader were reticent in commenting, Snell cited the Wilson speech in illustration of the unprecedented nature of the plan.

No Conferences.

At an early hour yesterday neither Vice President Garner nor Speaker Byrns had been officially informed whether the President would appear before Congress Friday, Saturday, or even Monday. An inquiry from a radio broadcasting company official is said to have roused their curiosity, and queries were made at the White House. Finally, at about 5 p. m., Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President, called the Capitol to say the plan was for the President to appear Friday night.

The President, in a message that now may be heard by the largest audience ever listening in on an opening address to Congress, is expected not only to review the accomplishments of the New Deal, but to debate them, grappling with the spending issue, now a keynote in Republican campaign preliminaries, and discussing the Naton's finances in general. He is expected to touch briefly on his legislative plans for the session, touching on such matters as neutrality, and possibly, indirectly, on the bonus.

This will be the first objective

75 Men Found After Tip Bares Gambling Place

An apparently fake message—reporting "someone shot" in a garage in the rear of 1328 Massachusetts avenue northwest—late yesterday led Second Precinct police into one of the most elaborately equipped gambling dens uncovered here in recent months.

The "tip-off" call sent squad cars and patrol wagons screeching into an alley near Fourteenth street and Thomas Circle. Hundreds of curious gathered at the scene as policemen, led by Lieut. N. O. Holmes, attempted to trace the report.

Doors to the garage were securely locked. Repeated knocks brought no response. The investigators, ready to record the alarm as false, prepared to leave. Then, the garage door opened slowly and several men appeared in the alley. First sight of the uniformed officers prompted them to scurry back and slam the door.

Police Circle Place.

Lieut. Holmes ordered the place surrounded. Additional policemen were summoned. Above the garage is an establishment known as the "Hayloft Club." Into this, Lieut. Holmes took several men and attempted to enter the garage from upstairs. Again he was met by locked and bolted doors.

Crowbars, hammers and screwdrivers were brought into play. An outer door of the garage was battered and smashed before the raiders could gain entrance. Once inside, a bare room, with the cement floor littered with liquor and beer bottles, was found. Another door, with a small "peep" hole, was the next obstacle.

This door was also securely locked. The policemen tore away part of a partition and entered. They found still another door—this one double and barred from the inside.

Furnishings Demolished.

Looking through a crack in the door, the officers saw a group of men huddled about a brightly lighted room beyond.

Again there was a demand to "open up." And again no effort was made to admit the policeman. Lieut. Holmes waved his men back. With all his weight, he threw himself against the door. It didn't budge. He tried again. This time the door gave way. Lieut. Holmes fell into the room and the raiders quickly followed.

Approximately 75 men were in the room. Some leaned against the walls, looking sullenly at the raiders. Others lounged on overstuffed chairs and couches. A few

Roosevelt Aims To Present Own Neutrality Bill

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

President Roosevelt yesterday determined to take the lead in presenting a revised neutrality program to Congress and expects to have an Administration bill ready within a few days, instead of leaving the initiative in this controversial issue to the Nye-Clark-Maverick bloc on Capitol Hill.

This was learned after the President discussed the neutrality problem with Secretary of State Cordell Hull, Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore, Chairman Key Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Affairs and Chairman Sam D. McReynolds of the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The Administration desires a flexible neutrality program, one which might be used to meet unforeseen situations as they arise. The President and his State Department advisers indicated their willingness at yesterday's conference to make some concessions to those demanding strict neutrality, but they do not propose to permit Congress to place the Chief Executive in a straitjacket in the conduct of foreign affairs.

Seeks United Front.

The President's action yesterday indicated that he was seeking a united Administration front on the neutrality issue and, achieving this, he would challenge the demands for rigid, mandatory legislation of the group which at the last session of Congress forced him to take a temporary law against his will.

The form of the Administration bill was not definitely indicated, although it was said that a measure would be ready for introduction in Congress as soon as the bill hopper is opened.

It is known, however, that Mr. Roosevelt is willing to have his authority to protect this country's neutrality limited, but he does not wish to have his hands tied so securely that he is only an automaton, issuing proclamations whether or not they are applicable to a given situation.

How this objective was to be achieved remained to be worked out in detail. Secretary Hull contended that yesterday's conference was a preliminary discussion and others indicated a second meeting would take place tomorrow morning between the Secretary of State, Senator Pittman and McReynolds.

McReynolds, who has been a stanch supporter of the Administration's neutrality desires, said he favored a bill which would make permanent the mandatory embargo section of the existing law without substantial change. But, he added, he also would add a new section giving the President discretionary authority to embargo essential materials of war, such as oil, cotton, copper and scrap iron to all belligerents to a conflict.

Agrees With Nye.

There is little difference between the views of McReynolds and Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, on giving the President discretion in embargoing essential war material. The North Dakotan would let the President enumerate the articles subject to an embargo as and when he saw fit.

But Senator Nye is strongly opposed to a section in the existing law which leaves to the President's discretion whether an embargo on

Ships and Planes Hunt for Tanker

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 31 (AP). The Australian government today ordered a search by sea and air for the steamer, Paringa, which disappeared in a Christmas Eve storm.

The vessel with three British officers and a crew of 28 Chinese was feared to have foundered swiftly, without being able to send distress signals.

The Paringa, a well-known Australian coastal vessel, departed from the western port of Victoria a week ago, towing the tanker, Vincas, which was to be broken up in Japan. The Vincas drifted ashore.

Kentuckian, 107, Hunts Bride; She Must Be Young and Pretty

Special Dispatch to The Post.

She must be young.

She must be pretty.

She must be willing to live in his cabin at Troublesome Creek in Letcher County, be satisfied with simple things, and know how to keep house. In return, Uncle Jerry promises her a good home and a good husband and he emphasizes the latter by pointing out that, despite his years, he is a lot younger than "many of them," that he is in good health and good spirits.

Uncle Jerry proved that he is in dead earnest by calling in a photographer here, who had a difficult time reaching his mountain dwelling. It was the first picture, he said, that he has ever had taken in his life. He's never liked such things, but it seemed necessary for the matrimonial magazines.

The cabin up there, where he's spent more years than most men spend on earth, has grown to be lonesome of late, he admitted to friends.

Neighbors of Uncle Jerry, of whom there are not many, believe he is the oldest man in Kentucky.

Uncle Jerry says he's mighty particular about the woman to be his wife. No old ones need apply, he warned.

Flurry of Suits Marks Deadline For Gold Cases

Attorney Files Petition for $169,000 for U. S. Bond in Court of Claims.

By the Associated Press.

The deadline for seeking damages from the Government for refusal to pay its obligations in gold expired yesterday with a flurry of new legal attacks on dollar revaluation policies.

Court of Claims officials said the last of a score or so of suits docketed since the Supreme Court's celebrated gold decisions last spring was a petition involving $169,000.

Three hours after the Court of Claims closed at 1 p. m., another bondholder asked the District Supreme Court to direct the Secretary of the Treasury to pay gold for $6,000 in Liberty bonds.

Earlier yesterday, the Compania de Inversiones Internacionales of Colombia appealed in the highest tribunal from a New York State court decision that it could recover only the face value of $3,135 in gold bonds from the Industrial Mortgage Bank of Finland.

The Supreme Court, sustaining abrogation by Congress of promises to pay in gold as respected currency and private obligations, ruled last spring that the Government could not repudiate such promises on its own debts, but that actual damage had to be shown before Government bondholders could recover more than the equivalent of face value in terms of the present dollar.

A few months after this decision, Congress shut the doors of the Court of Claims to suits seeking to prove such damage, effective January 1. The Government cannot be sued without its consent.

At the eleventh hour yesterday, Otis Beall Kent, a Washington attorney, filed a petition for payment of a $100,000 Government bond in gold or the equivalent amount of devalued currency. The latter is estimated at $1.69 for each gold dollar.

Before filing his suit, Kent presented his $100,000 bond to the Registrar of the Treasury, but was firmly refused payment in gold or the pre-devaluated dollar equivalent, $169,000. The test in the District Court was filed by John Ogdon, of Indianapolis, who said he acted as his own attorney and as executor for the estate of his father, James W. Ogdon.

Ogdon said he did not claim damages because of inability to get gold for six $1,000 Fourth Liberty bonds in the estate, but made his challenge only on the premise that the law under which the bonds were issued as contracts called for payment in dollars of 25.8 gold grains.

The Colombia concern asked $5,307 with interest from the Finland bank in the case appealed to the United States Supreme Court.

It contended that the gold clause resolution could not apply to international transactions participated in by nonresidents of the United States. The bonds were to be paid in gold coin "as it existed on July 1, 1934."

Meanwhile, with the approval of President Roosevelt, the Treasury yesterday liberalized regulations governing dealings in gold for industrial, professional and artistic purposes.

It directed that unmelted gold may be "acquired, held and disposed of" in amounts not exceeding 35 ounces at any one time, "without the necessity of holding a Federal gold license."

Officials said the move was intended to remove "some of the restrictions" and facilitate dealings in such gold, but had no connection with its vast supply of $10,119,000,000 in monetary gold.

On the Hustings

Astrologers Predict Roosevelt's Re-election; 'Mars in Gemini' Is All His; Landon's Way.

ALTHOUGH the straw ballots so far have given little comfort to the New Dealers, the astrologers are with President Roosevelt. In the current number of the American Astrology Magazine, they predict the re-election of Mr. Roosevelt on the basis that his cabalistic number is 234.

Just as the ancients gazed into the crystal at the beginning of a new year to obtain some prophecy of what awatied them and just as Broadwayites now consult clairvoyants, so it might do the political observers no harm to take counsel with the star-gazers.

The American Astrology Magazine contends that the most critical period of 1936 will come, not with the elections in November, but between May 14 and June 23, the period of the political conventions. At this period, assert the astrologers, "Mars, in Gemini, occupies the otherwise free arm of the cross and the ascendent of the horoscope of the United States."

"This Mars, in Gemini," assert the star-gazers, "is the Mars of Franklin D. Roosevelt, so that whatever occurs at this time is certain to have a bearing on the fortunes of the country and of the President as they will be affected in the November elections."

But the soothsayers have no doubt of President Roosevelt's re-election, except that they warn that with the election there will be "additional confusion in economic circles, as the crest of the boom, passed in June, starts to recoil" and that "though Mr. Roosevelt will have a personal victory he will be forced to work with a hostile Congress, which will more or less tie his hands and make the progress of his plans difficult."

The American Astrology Magazine, in reference to President Roosevelt, says that "to follow his Moon in its precessional aspects is to follow and understand his administration of office." A good many persons who scoff at the prophecies of astrology have long thought the New Deal is looney.

January Political Calendar.

January 3—Congress reconvenes, thus setting into operation the best political sounding board in the country, with the exception of the White House.

January 4—New York Republican supporters of Senator William E. Borah meet at dinner to formulate a campaign plan.

January 8 (evening).—Jackson Day dinners to be addressed by the President in his first avowed bid for re-election.

January 9—Democratic national committee meets to select a date and place for the party's national convention.

January 21.—Louisiana primary election.

January 25—American Liberty League advisers meet to formulate policies for year and to hear Alfred E. Smith.

January 29—Republican rally in Topeka, Kans., to boom Gov. Alf M. Landon's Presidential prospects.

January 29 (probably) — Grass Roots convention of Southern Jeffersonian Democrats at Macon to start intra-party campaign against President Roosevelt.

Gov. Alf M. Landon sent out some 10,000 New Year's greeting cards bearing the inscription, "The Landons wish you a balanced 1936 of health and happiness." In order to do that and keep the Landon budget balanced it was necessary to send the original cards back to the printer to have an eighth of an inch trimmed off them. The eighth of an inch would have required an extra one-half cent postage charge. The saving was $50. We shall see Monday how much trimming President Roosevelt did to bring the national budget closer to a balance.

Secretary Harold L. Ickes has been steamed up for a long time because much of the public, and a good many newspapers, persist in confusing WPA, headed by Harry L. Hopkins, and PWA, the Interior Secretary's own pride and joy.

Yesterday he boiled over. Some newspaper had stated that the PWA was employing a fan dancer. The charge really had been intended for the WPA. But even that organization denied it.

"It isn't true," said the testy Secretary. "Besides, just what is a fan dancer?"

clew leaders in Congress will have as to what the President's detailed plans for the session are to be. Although in private conferences he has let it be known that he wants a short session, and that his legislative proposals will be few indeed, he has called no preliminary conferences of leaders to discuss these plans, as has been his custom in the past.

What he has to say may be lost on the Friday night audience in the improbable event that the House refuses to waive its rules governing recesses. The unusual procedure undoubtedly will prove a broad partisan target for those Republicans who are looking for issues to shoot at, although, it was pointed out, it may not even be good Republican strategy to deny a President the right to speak at the hour he names.

Under the ordinary procedure, House and Senate on the opening day of a session would adopt a resolution calling for a joint meeting of the two houses to hear the President's address the following day. Former Presidents, on such occasions, always have appeared at midday, and there never has been any opposition.

A similar resolution for a joint session must be rushed through Friday, but, under the plan disclosed last night, it will not be adopted until the House has first acted to waive its rules to permit the night session.

Senate Democratic Leader Joseph T. Robinson, who normally would be consulted, along with other leaders, on the opening day plans, has not yet returned to the Capital. He is expected back either late tomorrow or early Friday.

Speculation turned last night on whether the President might take advantage of the occasion to present some matter of urgent importance, but if this is the case he has given no previous hint of it to any of his advisers in Congress.

Among members of Congress who called at the White House yesterday was Representative John J. O'Connor (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Rules Committee, which may have to devise a special rule to permit the joint night session.

House Democratic Leader William H. Bankhead, of Alabama, also chatted with the President, and told reporters he "wants as short a session as is possible in consistence with the public interest and any eventualities that might be caused by Supreme Court decisions."

Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, outstanding House authority on banking, who will celebrate his seventy-eighth birthday Saturday, discussed the budget with the President in "a very general sort of way," he said. Glass predicted little if any banking legislation this session.

Republicans are making few plans in advance of the President's message. A strategy conference was held early in the day by House Minority Leader Snell and Senate Republican Leader McNary. Later Snell apnounced that no House Republican conference will be held until next week "when we may know what the President's program is." McNary had scheduled a Senate Republican conference for Saturday, but probably will postpone it until next week.

Guffey Act Tax Coercive, Void, U. S. Judge Says

Court Holds Levy Forces Submission to Rule of Government.

By the Associated Press.

Kansas City, Dec. 31.—Federal Judge Albert L. Reeves ruled today the Guffey coal act was unconstitutional because, he said, a tax it imposed would coerce coal producing companies to submit to Federal regulation.

The ruling was the first outright opinion holding the act unconstitutional although, Judge Reeves said, several Federal judges in granting injunctions to coal mining companies had expressed doubt as to constitutionality of the law.

Constitutionality of the act was upheld in Kentucky. A case challenging its validity is now pending before the United States Supreme Court.

Judge Reeves granted injunctions sought by six western Missouri coal producing companies to restrain imposition of the tax on them.

The judge, in his memorandum opinion, stated "the tax clearly stands as a penalty to compel submission to a national regulatory code.

"In this case, the regulation of coal mining is not an incidental motive to the tax, but its purpose, both as stated in the act and as stated in the answer and return of the defendants, is to regulate. The only apparent purpose of the tax is to coerce the plaintiff to submit to regulation."

Tax 15 Per cent.

Enacted at the last session of Congress, the act would tax coal producers 15 per cent of the value of their mined coal, but the Government would agree to rebate 90 per cent to companies signing a compliance agreement to submit to regulations similar to those of the national industrial recovery act.

Judge Reeves said the tax imposed "is so burdensome and onerous as to destroy the business" of the petitioning coal companies and that while it was within the power of Congress to destroy by imposing a destructive tax, "yet, in this instance, the act provides for a 'drawback' of 90 per cent of the tax if the producer will accept and subject himself to the regulatory provision of a code."

"This code is not designed to facilitate the collection of the tax, but the regulatory provisions of the code are separate and apart and independent of the tax."

Follows D. C. Ruling.

Although the ruling of Federal Judge Reeves in Kansas City yesterday was the first lower court opinion flatly holding the Guffey act invalid, the District Supreme Court recently ruled that price-fixing provisions of the law were unconstitutional.

The local court granted an injunction against collection of the Guffey coal tax, in the Carter Coal Co. case, but ruled that wages and hours provisions of the law were constitutional. A Louisville, Ky., Federal judge, later, in the Tway company coal case, completely upheld the validity of the law.

Just before its Christmas recess, the Supreme Court agreed to review both the Carter and Tway company decisions, with the Government consenting. Hearings probably will not be held before February or March.

Senator Glass Blasts Press With Snowball

By the Associated Press.

Senator Carter Glass came away from a White House luncheon yesterday throwing snowballs—not at President Roosevelt, but at a reporter.

"I landed a good one and then escaped in the automobile," the Senator announced as he arrived at his office, still chuckling.

"That boy acted as if he were going to throw one at me, so I picked up a large piece—it was hard too — from the running board of the car and landed a good one."

The senior Virginia Senator will be 78 Saturday.

Talmadge Wins Control of All Georgia Funds

Atlanta, Dec. 31.—Georgia watched with speculation tonight the coming of a new year placing financial dictatorship in the hands of Gov. Eugene Talmadge, fiery New Deal critic and provisional candidate for President.

The failure of the 1935 Legislature to pass an appropriations act for 1936-1937 left in the Governor's hands control of the purse-strings holding the State's $20,000,000 annual revenue.

How Talmadge plans to manage the State in the face of a constitutional clause saying "no money shall be drawn from the treasury except by appropriation made by law" remained conjectural.

Talmadge Confident.

The Governor retained the noncommittal, confident attitude that has marked his activities since the adjournment of the Legislature.

"A State that doesn't owe anything and has plenty of money can operate," he said.

Asked if he planned drastic action, he answered:

"Why do anything as long as the State has the money to operate on and is operating as usual?"

Capitol officials indicated there would be between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000 to the credit of the State treasurer at midnight tonight. This, they explained, would keep institutions and staff departments going for a month or six weeks.

Chance of Extra Session.

There was considerable speculation as to how the Governor will manage to get along without calling an extra session of the Legislature—a thing he has persistently refused to do.

Some said he would employ the militia as he did during a highway board dispute several months ago. Others guessed he would carry over the 1935 appropriations act, basing his action on an obscure 1877 constitutional clause providing appropriations of that year should continue in force "until altered by law."

Reported withdrawals of $7,000,000 by the highway department last month led some observers to speculate that the Governor was getting the money out of the general treasury for general governmental use in case treasury funds are tied up.

Miners Journal Asks Labor Poll For Roosevelt

Organ of 354,082 Workers Makes Direct Appeal, Hits Big Business.

A direct appeal to labor to vote for President Roosevelt in the coming election was made yesterday by the United Mine Workers Journal, organ of the United Mine Workers of America. The journal goes to 354,082 miners throughout the country.

Basing an editorial on the platform for American industry adopted at the recent convention of the National Association of Manufacturers in New York, the Journal said "big business has openly declared war on President Roosevelt."

After placing the American Liberty League and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States in the same category with the Association of Manufacturers, the editorial continued:

"All right, gentlemen. You have declared war on the President and all those who approve his policies. You have declared war against labor and the entire mass of common people of this nation. Labor and the common people accept the challenge. There are more than 11,000,000 people out of work in this country, and you have declared war against them, too, because in your declaration of war you make no provision for them to work and live."

The Journal charges that opponents of the Administration propose to permit these people to starve.

Speaking directly to the Association of Manufacturers, the Journal said:

"You are brazenly fomenting a class war in this country which every good citizen outside of your association fervently hoped might be avoided for all time. You are deliberately stirring it up.

"Labor and the common people can outvote you 10 to 1 at the polls."

The miners' union is headed by John L. Lewis, considered by many the country's foremost labor leader. His word carries weight throughout the labor movement. Although a Republican, Lewis has worked in close harmony with the Administration.

Chance to Tell Story Is Sought By Hauptmann

By the Associated Press.

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 31.—Bruno Richard Hauptmann reiterated today he was innocent of the Lindbergh baby killing and expressed hope the "new year will bring out the truth."

To his wife, Anna, and to the prison warden, Col. Mark O. Kimberling, who questioned him about reports of a partial confession, Hauptmann made his usual five-word denial, "I have nothing to confess."

Mrs. Hauptmann said the prisoner would "gladly" make a personal appearance before New Jersey's Court of Pardons, which next week will consider his plea for clemency.

"He's not afraid to appear," Mrs. Hauptmann said. "Why should he? He knows no more about the kidnaping than our baby, who wasn't born then."

Mrs. Hauptmann said she, too, would appear before the court if permitted. Gov. Harold G. Hoffman said yesterday he doubted she would be permitted to appear.

Hauptmann, who was nervous yesterday before the execution of Romaine Johnson, a Negro, spent a restless night. Col. Kimberling visited his cell at 1:45 p. m. and found Hauptmann was getting up, having missed both breakfast and dinner.

Hauptmann lay on his cot during the execution at 8 o'clock last night, apparently feigning sleep, because he told Col. Kimberling today he had difficulty getting to sleep. The warden said Hauptmann's nervousness yesterday and last night was "natural" and said he appeared "perfectly normal" today. Mrs. Hauptmann said he was in good mental and physical condition.

The court of pardons, it was learned today, will hear Hauptmann's petition either Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday of next week.

'Boss' McLaughlin Succumbs in Jail

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—Private funeral services today ended the varied career of John J. (Boss) McLaughlin, 67, who died yesterday in Leavenworth Prison where he was serving a five-year sentence for participation in the $200,000 kidnaping of Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker.

A death certificate filed with the Leavenworth, Kans., city clerk ascribed the death of the one-time Illinois State Representative, who was convicted as a principal changer of the ransom bills for the kidnapers, to chronic bronchitis and bronchial pneumonia.

McLaughlin was arrested here on April 28, 1934, on charge of conspiring to violate the "Lindbergh" law. Federal agents announced later he had admitted passing $53,000 of the ransom paid for the release of Bremer.

McLaughlin's 17-year-old son, Jack, seized with some of the alleged kidnap money, was released before his father's conviction at St. Paul.

Woman, Stepson Indicted as Killers

Trenton, N. C., Dec. 21 (AP).—Herbert Stanley, 55-year-old tobacco farmer, and his step-mother, also 55, were indicted for murder by the Jones County grand jury today for the shotgun slaying of Edward Stanley, 80, last November 18.

Stanley and his step-mother were arrested shortly after the slaying and Sheriff John W. Greagh quoted the farmer as confessing he shot his father because "he treated us bad."

The sheriff said Stanley related that he and his step-mother planned to marry, but Mrs. Stanley denied this and also denied any connection with the killing.

The elder Stanley was shot to death as he lay asleep. Mrs. Stanley, who informed officers of his death, said he killed himself.

Trial was set for Wednesday.

Van Vlack Faces Court In Murder of His Wife

Twin Falls, Idaho, Dec. 31 (AP).—Douglas Van Vlack, of Tacoma, Wash., alleged triple slayer, was held without bond at his preliminary hearing here today on a charge of first-degree murder of his former wife, Mildred Hook.

The young woman, whom Van Vlack admitted having abducted from Tacoma, was found shot to death in a railroad culvert near here November 29, nearly a week later. Van Vlack is charged also with the murder of Fontaine Cooper, State highway patrolman, who halted the pair near Buhl, Idaho, November 25. Deputy Sheriff Henry C. Givens, shot at the same time, died later.

Vote on Repeal of Tax Assured in California

Sacramento, Dec. 31 (AP).—Initiative petitions seeking repeal of California's new income tax law qualified today at the secretary of state's office, assuring a vote upon the controversial revenue measure at the general election next November.

Frank Jordan, secretary of state, said the petitions carried 195,844 signatures of registered voters. The income tax was passed by the 1935 Legislature and is expected to return about $20,000,000 a biennium. The rates range from 1 per cent of $1,000 of net taxable income to 15 per cent on $250,000 a year and more.

Didn't Want Money, Threat Suspect Says

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 31 (AP).—Roland E. Markell said at his Federal hearing today he would not have accepted the $250,000 he demanded in threatening letters to Frank E. Gannett, newspaper publisher, and Louis A. Wehle, Rochester, N. Y., brewer, if it had been offered him.

After saying he did it "to see how clever the G-men really were," he was jailed in default of $10,000 bail for the action of the Federal grand jury on charges of attempted extortion.

Police Wrecking Alleged Gambling Den

Lieut. N. O. Holmes, of the Second Police Precinct, destroying furnishings yesterday in a reputed gambling hideout, disclosed when police answered a "shooting" alarm.

75 in Raid Net

The policemen found a huge blackboard, which they said was used for posting horse race results. A pool table (but no cues nor balls) was found in one corner of the room. In another corner, a partition had been erected. Behind this was a battery of telephones. A nickle slot machine rested on a table. An adding machine, with a pile of alleged "racing slips" was found on another table.

A buzzer system—apparently to warn occupants of an impending raid—also was uncovered. Lieut. Holmes ordered all "patrons" to leave the place.

"And don't come back," he added.

He explained that there was no evidence of gambling when the raiders entered, and as a result, no arrests could be made.

Hardly had the last "patron" left, when Lieut. Holmes seized a large plank and started to demolish furnishings and equipment. He was aided by other policemen, who wrecked and destroyed tables, telephones, "racing slips" and partitions. An adding machine and other articles were confiscated as "evidence."

Lieut. Holmes said the "principals"—operators and owners—apparently escaped before police entered and took with them what money might have been collected during the day's race betting.

He said the "Hayloft Club" had no connection with the alleged gambling establishment.

"Whoever sent in that 'shooting' call wanted us to do just exactly what we did," Lieut. Holmes said.

Germans Enforce Laws Against Jews

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, Dec. 31.—Jews of Germany, stripped of citizenship rights during 1935, said farewell today to their Gentile maids under 35, who are forbidden to work for them after tomorrow.

Simultaneously, all Jewish government employes were pensioned off and left their offices for the last time.

The number of persons involved in these latest of a series of anti-Semitic measures was not ascertained.

The Jewish Telegraphic Agency reported from Berlin that "thousands of Aryan" women office workers were faced with the prospect of starting the new year hunting for jobs when the Nazi government, in a surprise order, extended the Nurnberg laws to apply to them.

"The order prohibits 'Aryan' women from working as secretaries and stenographers for Jews and instructs them to quit their jobs immediately," the agency said. It stated some 30,000 serving girls were made jobless.

30 Filipino Leaders Accused as Rebels

By the Associated Press.

Manila, Philippine Islands, Dec. 31.—Charges of illegal association were filed today against 30 Sakdal leaders while authorities exerted every precaution to prevent an uprising of their followers.

The government alleged the Sakdals have organized throughout the islands for two years for the purpose of rebellion and sedition.

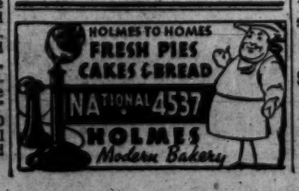
Constabularymen reported they had killed the long-sought bandit chieftain, Teodoro Asedillo, and two of his companions near the village of Caldon in Tayabas province.

President Manuel Quezon signed 14 bills today.

They authorized reorganization of the judiciary, immediate retirement of Manila railway bonds for $6,750,000, granting the president powers to reorganize the government, a resident commissioner in Washington, appropriation of $50,000 for typhoon relief and $60,000 for Filipino expenses to the Olympic games.



Professors Put Pitt on Blacklist; 'Insecurity,' Religion Involved

Association Declares Administration of Dr. John G. Bowman 'Inimical to Our Ideals;' 'Fear Surrounds Faculty.'

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, Dec. 31.—The American Association of University Professors today placed the University of Pittsburgh on its ineligible list because of alleged "insecurity of academic tenure."

The vote of the delegates to "blacklist" the Pennsylvania school was unanimous.

In their action, the professors emphasized they were not criticizing the university as a whole, but its present administration as represented by Chancellor John G. Bowman.

Dr. Ralph E. Hinstead, of Syracuse University, chairman of a committee which investigated the university, told the delegates "the administration of Dr. Bowman is inimical to the ideals of this association."

He said "the least serious question involved" was the dismissal from Pitt of Dr. Ralph D. Turner for expressing religious views Chancellor Bowman regarded as "subversive."

It was Dr. Turner's discharge that prompted the association's investigation of the university.

Dr. Hinstead declared the "almost universal testimony of 100 professors interviewed by the committee was that an atmosphere of fear, uncertainty and intimidation surrounds the faculty there."

Not only, he asserted, was there "supression of academic expression on social and economic issues," but "there is supression of freedom of speech about the administration of ordinary university affairs."

"We are not branding the university as a whole," Dr. Hinstead declared. "We are merely branding its present administration. If there is any university whose administration deserves to be put on the ineligible list, it is the University of Pittsburgh."

Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, is one of the university trustees.

When an institution is placed on the association's ineligible list the association does not receive new members from its faculty. Those already members are not affected.

Aid Fails to Lead Police to Karpis

Kansas, City, Mo., Dec. 31 (U.P.).—Homer ("Slim") Fanning, who asserted his companion in a gun fight with police was Alvin Karpis, public enemy No. 1, tonight was unable to lead officers to the notorious desperado's hiding place.

Fanning was returned to the detectives room for new questioning. The tall, gangling ex-convict led Chief of Detectives Thomas J. Higgins and 15 policemen to a tourist camp where he and his companion stopped last night. Karpis was not there.

It was not far from this tourist camp that Policemen Chester Decker and Leonard Johnson began a chase of the two gunmen this morning which led to a running gun fight and capture of Fanning.

Half a dozen scout cars patrolled the southeastern section of the city in the belief that Fanning's companion was hiding there. The policemen carried machine guns and tear gas bombs.

Young Bandit Loots Hospital Of Drug Supply

Unmasked Thug, Believed Addict, Invades Alexandria Institution.

A stocky, youthful bandit, believed to be a drug addict, armed with a blue-steel revolver, invaded Alexandria Hospital last night. He made off with most of a quantity of a drug stored in the hospital's emergency room.

The hospital, at 709 Duke street, is in one of Alexandria's busiest sections, but the robber picked an hour when the hospital's office and emergency room were almost deserted.

Only the young resident physician was there. It was about 10 p. m. The hospital clerk had gone off duty half an hour earlier. Most of the nurses were on the upper floors, attending to patients.

The robber was unmasked, wearing a cap and a light gray coat. He looked to be about 35. His hair was blonde.

"He was a dope addict, all right," the physician later said. "He was pale as a ghost. He was nervous the way they all are. He kept that gun pointed right at me, and I was nervous, too."

The man forced the physician ahead of him, and they went to the emergency room, just to the left of the entrance. From its shelves the bandit plucked vials of a sleep-producing narcotic. Then he fled.

The physician saw him run out into the alley in the rear. No one heard any car. Apparently, he must have escaped on foot. The physician telephoned Alexandria police. Detective Joseph Butler responded.

The physician declined to give his name to reporters, but Butler's report described his as "Dr. Thurmmin, intern."

Last night, police radios were broadcasting the lookout throughout the metropolitan area:

"White man, 32 to 35 years old; 5 feet, 2 inches tall; wearing a light gray topcoat; armed with a blue-steel revolver; probably a dope fiend; wanted for holdup and robbery at Alexandria Hospital."

Stomach Operation For Olson Failure

By the Associated Press.

Rochester, Minn., Dec. 31.—A Mayo Clinic surgeon operated today upon Gov. Floyd B. Olson but failed, upon encountering an inflammatory condition, to remove a stomach growth which caused the executive's illness.

A statement, signed by Dr. William J. Mayo and other physicians, said:

"Operation on Gov. Olson this morning revealed a condition in which an extensive operation was not advisable. Medical treatment will be instituted following convalescence from the operation."

The Governor will remain under observation for the three weeks he must remain in Rochester, it was announced.

Physicians disclosed their belief that further operation would fail to cure the disorder which was caused by a polyp—an accumulation of secretion in the Governor's stomach.

Guards' Shots Thwart Attempted Jail Break

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 31 (AP).—An attempted break from the Frankfort State Reformatory early today failed when two young prisoners were frightened from a ladder by the shots of guards.

The two who tried to escape are Allen Geans, alias James, 25, and Tennessee Wooten, 24. Guards M. H. Gregory and T. T. Dean shot at the prisoners as they were climbing a ladder to scale the back wall. Neither was wounded.

Chicago Killing Probe Digs Up Capone's Gang

Underworld Theory Developed in Assassination of Legislator.

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Dec. 31.—State Representative Albert J. Prignano's concern over the animosity of Capone gangsters was disclosed today, as detective squads sought three men and a woman for questioning in connection with the Democratic leader's slaying.

Capt. John Norton said he had learned that Prignano had mentioned to some of his constituents in the "Bloody Twentieth" Ward that the mob men were arrayed against him.

John Stege, supervising captain, ordered the seizure of Lawrence (Dago) Mangano—Public Enemy No. 8 and reputed gambling boss—for interrogation as hectic efforts of investigators were attended by little progress. Stege said he had been told that Prignano, who doubled as State legislator and Democratic ward committeeman, had quarreled with Mangano over the latter's invasion of the ward.

Special stress was laid on the hunt for Sam Lapicola. The car abandoned by the assassins who shot Prignano late Sunday night was traced to him. Frank Lamonica, who owned the machine before it was sold to Lapicola through the agency of Angelo Lazzia, was also sought, but relatives informed investigators he had left town Monday. The third quarry of the police squads was an unnamed girl who fled from Lazzia's home when police captured him under fire last night.

Meanwhile, throngs of mourners from Prignano's bailiwick filed past his casket. Neighbors circulated the word that he had died a poor man. A collection was started to assure a pompous funeral.

So heavy was the file of friends that carpenters were called to shore up the sagging floor of the politician's lavish apartment.

Chemical Export Gain Is Reported by U. S.

Chemical exports reversed their seasonal trend by hovering around peak levels during November, the Department of Commerce reported yesterday, bringing the total for 11 months of 1934 to $125,000,000. The total value of November's chemical exports — $13,136,500 — was 20 per cent ahead of November, 1934, and has been exceeded only once in recent years.

Heavy exports of dyes, medicinal and industrial chemicals, paints and varnishes were responsible for the peak, although fertilizers made a gain of 50 per cent compared with the same period in 1934. The report, pointed out that the United States, a few years ago an importer of potash fertilizer, is now an important exporter.

FERA Can't Be Sued, Court in N. C. Rules

Columbia, S. C., Dec. 31 (AP).—The South Carolina Supreme Court held that the Federal Emergency Relief Administration was not subject to suit today in deciding a Richland County case.

The case was brought by B. Harris, a foreman on a relief project, against State Administrator J. D. Fulp and County Administrator T. W. Miller for $979 in back pay allegedly owed him by the FERA.

The court ruled the State relief administration, holding Government funds in trust and acting as a public agency, could not be sued by ordinary processes.

6 Are Landed Safely After 'Fire' on Blimp

Miami, Fla., Dec. 31 (AP).—Six passengers were brought down safely and 122,000 cubic feet of helium gas released today when the pilot of the Goodyear blimp, Puritan, smelled smoke and made an emergency landing.

Pilot R. J. Blair noticed the smoke coming from a short circuit in the battery and made a quick descent. After helping the passengers out the crew jerked the rip cords and released the costly helium.

The fire was confined to the battery.

U. S. 'Divisions' Are Assailed By Vandenberg

Senator Calls Separation 'Positive Inspiration' for Farleyites.

Government decentralization proposals of the National Resources Committee for "little capitals" scattered throughout the Nation yesterday were assailed by Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), Michigan, as "a positive inspiration for the Farleyites," and a "bonanza for the bureaucrats."

"The pleasant idea of dividing up the country into a dozen provinces is just one more logical step in the new planning of the New Deal," Vandenberg said. "There would be something really to be said for decentralization and co-ordination if promoted by anti-bureaucrats."

He said Democrats now are proposing "multiplication," instead of the fewer Federal functions they promised.

Cities suggested as "little capitals" by the National Resources Board were New York, Knoxville, Atlanta, New Orleans, Chicago, Portland, Oreg., San Francisco and Denver.

In denouncing the proposal, Vandenberg said "these avid bureaucrats used to call the Commerce Building 'Hoover's folly' because it was so big."

"But they swiftly overran and outgrew it," he added. "Alphabetical pay rollers still increase at the rate of about 10,000 every month. The Government now occupies 4,581,000 feet more office space in Washington than at the peak of the 1928 boom. It has slopped over into 180 buildings in the Capital alone.

"So now it is proposed to expand these opportunities in the grand manner. What could be sweeter than a dozen provinces with a dozen subcapitals, each necessarily manned with complete equipment of 'deserving Democrats.'"

They were sponsored and christened by daughters of the namesakes—Miss Katherine Cushing, Fredonia, N. Y., accompanied by her sister, Marie, and by Mrs. Larz Anderson, Brookline, Mass., accompanied by her husband, former Ambassador to Japan.

Would-Be Citizens No Longer To Count 'Constitution's Legs'

Immigration Examiners to Drop 'Trick Questions' of Aliens Seeking Naturalization, Declares MacCormack, Issuing New Instructions.

Hereafter an alien may become a citizen of the United States without knowing "how many legs the Constitution has," or how many stars there are on a quarter-dollar. "Trick questions" no longer will be asked by naturalization examiners, under instructions issued yesterday by Col. D. W. MacCormack, commissioner of immigration and naturalization.

The Government doesn't care whether the applicant knows "how many gallons of water the Amazon River discharges per hour," and he or she can win citzenship without even knowing how high the Bunker Hill Monument is or "what Ireland has been fighting for."

Questions Analyzed.

All these questions have been asked by examiners in the past, it was revealed. A compilation of questions used by 54 senior examiners disclosed, according to Commissioner MacCormack, a total of 848 questions being used in tests, no one question being asked by all the examiners, and 566 queries, or 67 per cent of the total, being asked by only one examiner of the 54. Eighty per cent of the questions were purely factual, the commissioner said, and only 20 per cent required reasoning.

Questions hereafter are to be "designed to disclose the petitioner's inherent qualifications upon which good citizenship is based, and to disclose his knowledge, understanding and acceptance of the fundamental prinicples of our Constitution."

The commissioner's order added: "If the petitioner has difficulty in expressing himself as to the fundamental principles of the Constitution, simple illustrations of the manner in which these prinicples affect him in everyday life should be presented and his attitude toward such situations obtained."

Included in the order was an analysis of the Constitution's principles. One whole section, entitled "Constitution a Living Document," was devoted to amendment. It read as follows:

Constitution Discussed.

"The Constitution is a living, growing document which provides within itself the means for its amendment, and for such changes in the Government as the people may find necessary or desirable in order to keep pace with needs of the day. It provides for peaceful and orderly change in government and in the Constitution itself, thus guarding against fundamental change through force or violence.

"Many of the most important principles of the Constitution, particularly those dealing with the liberty of the individual, have been added to it by amendment."

Hope Entering Edith Maxwell Cell At Wise

New Trial to Prove Innocence Possible as Judge Considers Evidence.

The fight to see that justice is done Edith Maxwell, mountain school teacher, who faces a 25-year sentence in prison for the alleged slaying of her father, is being led by her brother, Earl Maxwell.

The Post, in raising a defense fund for Edith Maxwell, is working in the interest of justice. A new trial will give her a chance to prove her innocence.

Earl Maxwell, in a series of articles written exclusively for The Post, is telling of his efforts in behalf of his sister.

By Earl Maxwell.

Wise, Va., December 31.—A ray of hope today entered my sister Edith's gloomy cell in the form of a decision of Circuit Court Judge H. A. W. Skeen to consider a second petition for a new trial.

It was Judge Skeen who presided at the trial of my sister and who sentenced her to prison for killing my father. He also had denied her previous request for a new trial.

Attorneys were asked by Judge Skeen to file written briefs on constitutional questions raised, the most important of which is the contention of our attorneys that the Virginia statute which forbids women on juries is contrary to the United States Constitution.

In announcing his decision, Judge Skeen said he had an open mind on this question and announced that he would extend the present term of court until January 15 or 20 until Edith's case is finally disposed of by him.

The court was scheduled to close its regular session today and for that reason the attorneys hurried to perfect the petition which we hope will result in a new trial for Edith.

Edith was delighted when we went to her cell and told her the good news. It was a real happy New Year for her, to know that she still may have a chance to tell her story to another jury.

Judge Skeen also said he had an open mind on another constitutional point raised by M. J. Fulton, a Richmond lawyer, who recently entered the case. Mr. Fulton contended that the Virginia statute which forbids women to sit on trial and grand juries is contrary to the law which conferred on women the rights of full citizenship.

Newly discovered evidence, which may show that my father, Trigg Maxwell, died from apoplexy and not from the blows struck by Edith with the slipper, also evoked interest by the court.

Included in the petition was an affidavit in which a Richmond pathologist was quoted as saying that a microscopic examination of my father's brain might show that his death was caused by apoplexy.

To demonstrate that this would be possible, I expect that my father's body will be exhumed some time this week and another autopsy will be performed.

In the petition for the new trial also was included a statement of Dr. G. T. Foust, who said that his testimony for the Commonwealth at the trial in which he said father's death was caused by the slipper was his opinion and not a fact deduced from a scientific examination of father's brain.

If Judge Skeen should rule favorably on Edith's second petition a new trial will be held in March. If it is overruled, the case will go the Virginia State Court of Appeals.

A contribution of $5 received yesterday from J. P. Peters sent The Post's fund for Edith Maxwell's defense to $768.08.

Storm Victims Aided.

The American Red Cross has sent $10,000 to the Philippines Red Cross Chapter at Manila to aid the victims of the Christmas Eve typhoon. Reports from the chapter at Manila were that about 150,000 persons were affected in southern Luzon. Red Cross workers were on the scene giving assistance.

Mother Is Held In Fire Death Of Her Baby

Mrs. Bessie Bruckschen Is Blamed by Prince Georges Jury.

Mrs. Bessie Bruckschen, whose 2-month-old daughter, Dorothy, was burned to death Christmas, was free on $1,000 bond yesterday awaiting the action of the Prince Georges County grand jury.

A coroner's jury, meeting Monday night in Capitol Heights, accused Mrs. Bruckschen of negligence and ordered her held for the grand jury.

The baby was burned to death Christmas when fire destroyed the Bruckschen home. Mrs. Bruckschen was not at home at the time, having gone to the home of a neighbor. The fire started when a gasoline stove, overheated by a nearby cooking stove, exploded.

Four other children were rescued by neighbors, and one of them now is in Casualty Hospital.

Revival of the long-discarded milk distribution fund will be the theme for discussion when the Prince Georges County Exchange Club meets tomorrow at College Park, Md.

The fund, which was voluntarily exhausted more than a year ago, provided at one time for the giving of about 3,000 quarts of milk to needy families in the county.

Dr. Raymond Vawter, of Hyattsville, chairman of a special committee appointed to consider the matter, will call for the vote. Families that will benefit by the fund are located mainly in the metropolitan area of the county.

All records for the number of foreclosure petitions filed in the Prince Georges County Circuit Court were declared broken yesterday when 14 were received in the clerk's office in two days.

Pinckney Ryon, deputy clerk, attributed the sudden influx to the fact that financial institutions were trying to clear their books by the end of the year.

Most of the foreclosures were on properties located in and around Hyattsville. Mortgages on these amounted to approximately $28,000.

An increase of 3 per cent in the acreage of winter wheat seeded the past fall for the harvest of 1936 was reported yesterday by the Maryland Crop Reporting Service at College Park.

Acreage is estimated at 428,000 acres, as compared with 416,000 acres sown in the fall of 1934. The new area, however, represents a decrease of 9 per cent from the average 1927-31 seeded acreage of 469,000 acres.

The crop was reported above average as of December 1, the condition being placed at 97 per cent against 86 per cent on the same date a year ago and the 10-year average condition of 84 per cent. The report stated the crop was sown on well prepared seed beds and that fall growing weather was favorable.

The crop reporting service also predicted 31 per cent increase will be noted in the number of pigs raised in the United States during the past fall.

The agriculturalists, however, point out that this total will be 27 per cent below the 5-year average set between 1929 and 1933. Also, they say, the combined spring and fall crop will be 5 per cent less than the total 1934 crop.

Beltsville Grange has completed organization for 1936, with the election of Henry T. Converse as master; L. L. Hurley, overseer; Dr. J. I. Palmore, lecturer; Peter Gallant, steward; Miss Mary E. Hall, chaplain; Eben Jenkins, assistant steward; Miss Susie Beall, lady assistant steward; James S. Heal, treasurer; George Darcy, secretary; Mrs. Jane Beall, gatekeeper; Mrs. Henry T. Converse, Ceres; Mrs. Eben Jenkins, Pomona, and Miss Emma Simonds, flora.

Officers of the Prince Georges County Exchange Club for the first six months of 1936, recently elected, are: Charles G. Burton, Cottage City, president; Frank B. Smith, Mount Rainier, first vice president; E. F. Zalesak, College Park, second vice president; Vincent Tompkins, jr., Hyattsville, third vice president; J. B. Waters, jr., Riverdale, treasurer, and Dr. Hugh S. Cawthorne, secretary.

The board of control is composed of the officers, together with Walter L. Green, retiring president; Frank P. Palmer, Paul H. Kea, Dr. Ray A. Vawter, Dr. Harry Nalley and Dr. Martin J. Keane.

A committee to study the advisability of the club resuming the distribution of free milk has been named, composed of Dr. Vawter, chairman; Leland H. Cheek and Samuel H. Harvey. Dr. W. Burton Spire was named chairman of a committee to study the State gross receipts tax, together with Burton and Harvey.

John Flecher Moulden, of Riverdale, has been elected president of the Men's Club of Pinkney Memorial Protestant Episcopal Church, Hyattsville. Other new officers are Elgin M. Noack, vice president; John Burton, secretary, and William Gasch, treasurer.

New officers of Mount Hermon Masonic Lodge, Hyattsville, are Harry B. Shaw, worshipful master; Charles E. Prince, jr., senior warden; Arthur E. Bonnet, junior warden; Thomas F. Shanahan, secretary; William A. Shepherd, treasurer; Ira E. Widmeyer, tiler, and Past Master Creese, member of the board of trustees for three years. Shepherd, Widmeyer and Creese were re-elected. Installation will be held next Tuesday.

Jurors' Head Accuses Todd Death Witnesses

Los Angeles, Dec. 31 (AP).—Grand Jury Foreman George Rochester accused key witnesses tonight of "not telling all they know" in the Thelma Todd death inquiry.

Rochester made his assertion after Roland West, busines associate and "best friend" of the screen comedienne, had nominated himself as the "surprise guest" Miss Todd planned to accompany to a cocktail party December 15—the day before her body was found.

Trolleyman Gets Lost With All Passengers

Minneapolis, Dec. 31 (AP).—His employers considered providing a map and compass today for a one-man street car operator who got lost with his car for 30 minutes in the maze of downtown tracks, finally discharged 55 passengers to find their own way out, then returned to the wrong carbarn.

Some of the passengers noticed the operator had made a wrong turn last night but he said:

"Just keep calm. I'll get us out of this."

Half an hour later nobody was sure where he was. The passengers asked the operator. "Doggone if I know," he said. "I'm lost. Let's call it a day."

He let the passengers out and set off for the West Side carbarn. After a meandering trip through North Minneapolis and over a Mississippi River bridge, he sighted a carbarn and turned in.

Company officials said he was a new man and would get another chance.

D. C.-Virginia Boundary Fight Predicted Soon

Spirited Battle Expected in Congress; Rep. Smith to Urge Approval.

The heralded fight over the District-Virginia Boundary Commission's report will occur early in the approaching session of Congress, it appeared yesterday, as Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, announced he would introduce a bill propoing approval of the commission's findings.

Under the terms of the organic act, the division of land between Virginia and the Federal Government on the southern fringe of the Potomac river does not become law until it is approved by both Congress and the Virginia Legislature.

Smith, who sponsored the creation of the commission, to settle a 100-year-old controversy, said he believed the findings are fair. The Justice Department and the National Capital Park and Planning Commission are united in the belief that the report is grossly unfair to the Federal Government.

The preliminary bout between proponents and opponents of the report will get under way before the House Judiciary Committee, of which Representative Sumners, of Texas, is chairman.

Representative Montague, of Virginia, is ranking majority member on the committee.

Opponents of the commission's report, which proposes giving all the more valuable land to Virginia and only a strip adjacent to the Mount Vernon Memorial boulevard to the United States, are hanging their major hope of blocking approval on the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Senator Ashurst, of Arizona, is chairman of the latter committee, and Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee and a member of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, is ranking majority member.

Tied up indirectly with the boundary dispute is the municipal airport site controversy. Adoption of the report as it now stands would award the Washington Airport to Virginia and the Gravelly Point site to the Federal Government.

Arlington County's opposition to the sale of the Washington Airport to the Federal or District governments has been based on the annual revenue it has derived from taxing the property. Definite approval of this claim, it is believed, would strengthen the county's case and probably would lead to the sale of the property for commercial development.

'36 Dawns Amid Bells, Whistles In Alexandria

The year 1936 was ushered in with watch-night services in many of the churches of the city, among them St. Paul's Episcopal, the Methodist Episcopal Church South, Immanuel Lutheran Church, where Sylvester Eve services were held, followed by a watch gathering in the home of the pastor; the Free Methodist Church and the Temple Baptist Church.

Feast of the Circumcision will be held in St. Mary's Catholic Church today, with celebration of masses at 6, 7 and 9 a. m., and at 12:10 p. m. The day is a holiday of obligation with members of the Catholic faith.

The annual custom of speeding the parting year and greeting the new with ringing of bells and blowing of fire sirens was observed.

The police department reports arrests of 4,318 during the year 1935, an increase of 766 over the previous year.

Fire Chief James M. Duncan presents as his report for 11 months, a total of 291 fires, with damage estimated at $30,000. This, however, does not include the destruction by fire of the CCC camp at the old shipyard plant, which was estimated at a loss of $20,000. The total fire loss is approximately $8,350 more than for 1934.

Commonwealth's Attorney Albert V. Bryan stated yesterday that the case against Robert K. Foster, of Baltimore, a retired Methodist minister, on a charge of bigamy, would be dropped, inasmuch as it has been found impossible to get witnesses here for the prosecution.

The warrant was made out on complaint of the wife of Foster, whom he is alleged to have married in Alexandria in July, 1934, but was never served by the local police. It was sent to Baltimore authorities. Foster has never appeared in Alexandria in connection with the case.

Miss Maude Prince and Miss Dorothy Dolph, both of 233 West Windsor avenue, Alexandria, were overcome by the effects of fumes from a gas stove they were cooking breakfast on yesterday morning. They were rendered semi-conscious, and called L. S. Evans and C. R. Lankford, of the rescue squad, who revived them after about 20 minutes' work. The accident is being investigated by Sergt. George Everly and Policeman Mullen.

City Manager E. C. Dunn and City Health Officer Dr. W. Lewis Schafer conferred on Monday evening with a committee from the Alexandria Medical Association relative to a new setup in the local health department, with regard to attending charity cases in the city.

It is understood the physicians will present a resolution to the city council urging the appointment of two members of their profession to attend such cases, thereby relieving Dr. Schafer of such work and allowing him to devote his entire time to the duties of his office.

The committee was composed of Drs. William B. Wilkins, O. A. Ryder, J. M. Love and S. M. Noore.

City Manager Dunn stated he will confer further with the committee to determine their program to be presented to the city council, as it will doubtless require changing several city ordinances.

Alexandria police have been asked to look for Hoover Claggan, 28 years old, who has been missing from his home since last Sunday.

Not What We Say— But What Our Customers Say...

I like to deal at Nachman's because it's such a friendly store. The minute one enters the door at 512 9th Street, one feels that the salesmen really want to help.

They don't try to sell me everything on the floor. Instead, they are most courteous in listening to my own ideas of what I want and most helpful in their suggestions.

Nachman's carries good merchandise. I never have any worries on that score. My problem in shopping for furniture is finding just the suite or the piece I want and then figuring out some way of paying for it.

In arranging terms to suit MY convenience Nachman's are most courteous. They seem to go out of their way to make buying furniture a pleasure for me.

The Paths Of Peace.

Although the governmental press bureau denies the rumor, members of the Austrian Diet assert that Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg is about to become a monk. The report is not at all incredible. What moves one to wonder is the fact that the chancellor is said to be considering this step because of grief over his wife's death and weariness in the pursuit of politics.

There is a prevalent idea that monasteries are filled by souls who have fled there because they were tired of life or afraid of it. This scarcely touches the hem of truth's garment. Catholic and Anglican abbots, Orthodox archimandrites, look with some suspicion upon the postulant who comes to them from any such cause. Most monks have felt a vocation to the severe habit of monasticism at an age when every-day existence promised them far more pleasure than pain.

And the attraction goes deeper than the popular idea supposes. Few sensitive men, of any faith or none, live their whole lives without once contemplating the adoption of an at least semi-monastic rule. More men than the world guesses rigorously follow in secret a rule of this kind, while openly pursuing ordinary occupations. These phenomena are the results of a craving inherent in humanity itself.

To the religious eye the appeal of a monastic existence is obvious—devotion to service, whether service of what is secularly called the "practical" sort, or a service of prayer, in the words of Dostoievsky, "for those who have none to pray for them and for those who will not pray." To any thoughtful mind the attraction is far from dim—the attainment, through renunciation; not of material placidity, but of spiritual peace.

A Master Of Detail.

A little more than 20 years ago groups of students at the War College, their class work over, could be seen riding over the battlefields of northern Virginia studying at first hand the military operations and tactical strategy of McClellan, Burnside, Meade, Hooker, Grant and Lee. Leading them was a distinguished brigadier general who had been appointed president of the college only a short time after his graduation as a student.

Gen. Hunter Liggett's early tactical rides were typical of his entire military career. A naturally brilliant officer, he never neglected the small details of administration that so often mark the difference between "successful accomplishment of the mission" and failure.

At one time Gen. Liggett actively led the largest body of American troops ever to take the field under a single command. Yet officers at the War Department who served under him recall that never once—at St. Mihiel, the Meuse or elsewhere—did Hunter Liggett ever forget the welfare of his men, and the multitude of details that contributed to their successes.

Throughout the country today hundreds of thousands who fought under his command in the First Corps, and later in the First Army, mourn the passing of one of America's greatest tacticians, who, in addition to his military genius, was one of this Nation's most popular leaders in the dark days of 1917-1918.

Consolidating Positions.

Mussolini has explained to Italy that the reason why his northern army of invasion has not advanced farther than the 75 miles from Eritrea to Makale is because it is necessary to consolidate positions. His comments on the strategy of the southern army in retreating from its initial advances in Ogaden are not reported. At all events, no champagne corks popped in Rome or elsewhere in Italy on New Year's Eve. In the first place, after three months of warfare with all the weapons on their side, the Fascist gains are nothing to celebrate. In the second place, champagne falls under sanctions.

"Because it is necessary to consolidate positions." The need to consolidate his own positions must have been uppermost in Il Duce's mind as he used this shopworn alibi. The wedding rings and old frying pans which all Italy has poured forth to support the African campaign can offer small reassurance against all the obstacles that have sprung up. The refusal of Britain to be cowed, the inability of the French to forget their commitments, the aloofness of the United States in the matter of war supplies and, finally, the adamancy of Geneva, supported by a roar of public opinion in refusing to admit the validity of Italian excuses for this totally unnecessary war—all must give the dictator serious doubts as to his future.

To cap these, the advice of the Italian military experts proves to have been sound: Ethiopia is not to be conquered by erecting a monument at Adowa and bombing the Red Cross flag. All in all it is very sensible strategy for Mussolini to begin to emphasize the desirability of consolidating positions.

Coincidence With A Moral.

Occasionally a mere coincidence in human affairs carries with it a moral possessing almost the force of revelation. Such enlightenment is given by the chance which on the same day brought publication of the McDonald report on the treatment of Jews in Germany, and the news of the death of Rufus Daniel Isaacs, the Marquess of Reading.

In the report of the League of Nations' commissioner for refugees, on which we commented yesterday, is outlined in restrained and unemotional language the successful campaign to exclude Jews "from any part in the cultural and intellectual life of Germany." Between the lines of Lord Reading's achievements as one of the greatest of contemporary British statesmen is found the equally successful British effort to utilize outstanding ability and integrity for the common good, regardless of petty differences of race and creed.

Prejudice and enlightenment will not mix in the human mind. When the one triumphs, the other must depart. Happy the people who can with justice claim that, by and large, they make enlightenment a criterion in choosing their leaders. Tragic the lot of those who are forcefully subordinated to rulers in whom prejudice is the dominant characteristic.

The second son of a substantial but undistinguished London fruit merchant, Rufus Isaacs early showed the independent characteristics which made him, in the words of a great English newspaper, "the most eminent and most versatile British public servant of his race and faith since Disraeli." At 14, he went to sea as a cabin boy, and in that lowly position first looked upon the shores of India to which, nearly half a century later, he was to return as viceroy. Returning from this nautical adventure to continue school, he worked up through the channel of the law to be successively solicitor general, attorney general and lord chief justice of England.

On the side, Isaacs was for some years a Liberal member of Parliament. In this country he is remembered best for his war missions which culminated in ambassadorial duties here in 1918. After the war he was for five years viceroy and governor general of India, and later for a time foreign minister of Great Britain. But no mere catalogues of offices can convey an adequate impression of Lord Reading's services to his country in posts of the utmost delicacy and responsibility. In all the varied fields of his achievement he consistently refuted the generality that versatility implies a lack of mastery.

As one surveys the contributions to his country made by this great Jew, the suicidal tactics of the Nazi mentality become more clear. Between a nation that rewards a man like Isaacs, and one that exiles a man like Einstein, there lies the gulf which separates a mature civilization from a barbarian wilderness. Symbolized in this difference is one essential reason why Great Britain continues as a leader in the cause of civilization, while Germany, for all her many qualities of greatness, slips steadily back in tragic degradation.

Failure And Remedy.

Washington's failure in success is made horribly clear by the fact that, although 18 fewer lives were lost in traffic accidents during the past year than in 1934, the toll for 1935 stands at 116. Successful though the community was in reducing highway fatalities, there is nothing but a confession of failure in deaths upon our streets which average over two a week.

It is significant that in the past two weeks of snow and holiday rush only one fatal accident was recorded, as contrasted with ten deaths during the first half of the month. The Police Department's commendable handling of shopping crowds in downtown areas will explain part of this; but the greater caution demanded by slippery roads seems responsible for the greater part of the improvement. Washington patently can avoid traffic accidents if it drives carefully. And Washington can be careful when the dangers of reckless driving are impressed upon it. The unbelievable thing is that any driver can today for an instant forget these dangers.

Almost every motorist has, at some time or other, seen a serious highway smash-up or its immediate aftermath. Indeed, with 35,000 the annual death toll throughout the country, a majority of the population has probably been affected more or less intimately by automobile fatalities. Yet, unaffected by these grim reminders of the hazards of the road, the cars speed on. With recklessness the admitted cause of most accidents, the average driver refuses to be careful until something such as ice or sleet makes it obviously risky for him to be otherwise. Campaigns, pledges, propaganda have availed little unless they teach this need of constant care.

The problem, then, boils down to the question of how to impress indelibly the price of recklessness upon the average driver. If Walter Chrysler's opinion is to be credited, this is not an impossible task. Says this automobile expert whose financial interests, if nothing else, demand careful driving: "Automobiles are now safe. Highways generally are safe. There is no reason why individuals cannot be educated to be safe, too."

The education will not come from schools nor yet from visiting professors. It can only be self-acquired. Registration for these most urgently required classes begins by a repetition of the sentiment expressed in Mr. Carmack's cartoon appearing in adjacent columns on this page today.

The Forgotten 10,000.

To the 10,000 Washington families on relief the New Year offers a very gloomy outlook. The limited funds available to keep them from hunger are being rapidly exhausted. By suddenly altering its relief policy the Administration has created a local situation which Congress had not anticipated. The District is not prepared to meet the crisis. Until adjustments can be made, the Federal relief system has a moral duty to prevent human suffering.

As Clarence Phelps Dodge points out in a statement today, the Community Chest, of which he is president, cannot be expected to step into the breach. Part of the chest's fund goes for relief. But that organization is bound by agreement to divide among its member agencies the fund recently collected. Since its minimum budget was not fully subscribed, it is impossible for the chest to assume any direct obligation for the care of the unemployed now coming to the end of their own resources.

Mr. Dodge properly asserts that the local government must assume this burden. The difficulty arises from the fact that the local budget is controlled by Congress. District officials have no authority to spend funds that have not been appropriated for that purpose or granted by the Federal relief system. Commissioner Allen has already signified his intention of asking Congress for a deficiency appropriation. Until such a measure can be enacted, the responsibility of supplying relief funds falls clearly upon the WPA, successor of the defunct FERA. It may be assumed that Administrator Hopkins will permit no actual suffering in Washington.

The apprehension among local officials and the recipients of relief, to say nothing of the Community Chest, seems to be welcomed by some Federal officials. It appears to be their purpose to impede local community relief so that the public will demand permanent centralization of the entire problem. So far as Washington is concerned, however, such cheap tactics would be discredited in advance. For the ultimate responsibility for the local relief policy rests with Congress. If that city council for Washington does its duty, there can be no question as to the ability of the Capital City to handle its own relief problem.

In the meantime, retrenchment consistent with development of a local relief system becomes the more imperative. Some families are in acute need. Others are known to be living better than they did in the so-called heyday of prosperity. The real problem is to make outlays correspond to essential needs, so that communities may successfully assume the primary relief burden without danger of bankruptcy or reversion to Federal doles, outright or disguised.

Calendric Nostalgia.

The New Year has been duly ushered in with all the old familiar fanfare—confetti, horns, toasts—but, alas, few calendars! Time was when the receipt of calendars was to the New Year as are cards to Christmas. Sending them to customers was a rite seldom neglected by the butcher, the baker, or the candlestick maker. Sometimes they arrived by mail; mostly by messenger. But always it was pleasant to unwind the tight roll and substitute the bright new calendars for the old. It was much more fun than changing automobile tags.

The calendars of those days fell more or less into four classifications. The first, or domestic pet type, pictured either a litter of surprised puppies tumbling out of an overturned basket, or a blue-eyed kitten pawing a shining spool of thread. The second, or "still life" variety, featured an imposing bunch of fruit, set off by a dead fowl with its head hanging over the edge of the painted table. Then there were the railroad calendars, always magnificent specimens with smoke and fire deplorably absent in these streamlined days. Last, but most popular for the kitchen were the pretty-girl calendars. Smiling serenely out from the depths of a hammock or protecting her face from the elements with a huge muff of violets, this healthy hunk of femininity had something Shirley Temple lacks.

There are, of course, plenty of calendars still being made. But they are spiritless compared to the dashing ones of yesteryear. The modern calendar is very efficient looking and sits well on the desk. But as a soul mate for beer and pretzels, it's a flop.

The Wild Life Conference.

From the St. Louis Star-Times.

President Roosevelt's call for a national Wild Life Conference, to be held in Washington from February 4 to 7, is the first move of that kind since President Coolidge assembled the conservation societies of the country in a similar gathering about a decade ago.

The danger is that in the selection of delegates by States, the conference will be made up predominantly of sportsmen who have shared the blindness of the gun and ammunition companies, in refusing to see that the first step in saving an endangered form of wild life is to stop killing it for a while. What is needed is a mixed gathering of open-minded men, men of all points of view who are willing to recognize facts and be guided by them.

Japan has ended her "year of the boar" and begun her "year of the mouse." This would seem to preclude any more routing in China, but the Japanese army will doubtless see to it that nibbling is continued.

Recovery Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are 5,000,000 families in the cities and towns of our country which should be on the land and self-supporting. If the Government would give a $1,000 farm of 30 acres to these families, the cost would be only $5,000,000,000: equal to this year's relief cost. These families would be permanently off the relief rolls, or should be; but that item would be the smallest part of the beneficence and advantage to the country. Such a program could be carried out over a period of five years, but should progress as rapidly as practicable.

Land now can be bought, at least in the South and Southwest, at $10 per acre and often with fair improvements. Do not do too much for these people; leave something for them to do in the way of future improvements. Though a certain amount of slum clearance in our cities should be effected, these houses must be rented and the occupants must have employment to pay the rent. The investment in farms would act differently, providing not only homes but permanent employment. Present farm-credit facilities, engaged in lending to farmers on crop liens for operation, could be extended to these farmers.

In our country at the present time we should give this land to these homeless people; not sell it and burden them with future debt. Let them start clear and have their chance in full. The country can afford it. The farmer could add to the improvements if he should wish and buy more land when able.

We gave away millions of acres of land under other conditions and can well return to this policy under circumstances far less favorable to the individual. H. C. MIDDLETON.

Italian-American Reply.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Not a word, not even a slight mention, was made in our previous letter of Fascism, of doctrines, of Mussolini, of fake achievements. Geraci Ignatius' idea is clearly only one, that of creating a false misconception of Italo-Americans as a whole, under the camouflage of alleged violations of our duties as naturalized American citizens. We reiterate once more, that we would gladly shoulder a gun in defense of the great republic of the United States. We solemnly affirm that we are in full accord with the laws and Constitution of this country. We do not attend communistic meetings, do not preach the overthrow of this Government, do not subscribe to the doctrine of Moscow. Let him solemnly assure the public that he has done likewise and that his criticism is sincere.

The Townsend Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If the Townsend plan calls 60 years of age the limit for workers, it would be advisable for the country to elect a President, Representatives and Senators, who are considerably under that age.

Then there would not be the risks of having so many vacancies if the plan becomes a law, giving the work of the country to those under 60 years of age.

"Plans, Not Platitudes."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Things are lining up for the Presidential campaign of 1936. The issues seem clear-cut between reaction and progressivism. The G. O. P. plays a tune on two strings. One of these is: "Back to the Constitution." Funny how these old fossils are always wanting to go backward. The other string is: "Extravagance."

If the Republicans under Harding, Coolidge and Hoover had not let the country be delivered bag and baggage to the big financial and business interests, it never would have gotten into such shape that it required a general overhauling. Roosevelt inherited a bankrupt country from Hoover. Hoover either did not recognize calamity when he saw it or was too unimaginative to conceive the nature or the need for doing something. To advocate re-electing Hoover at this time is tantamount to saying that the American people are too dumb to know when they have taken a licking.

Roosevelt's only chance to beat Borah is to take a straight progressive course. If the Supreme Court nullifies his program, his most logical course is to advocate such constitutional amendments as will make his social legislation secure. In this, of course, he will have the full support of the Democratic majority in both houses. It is impossible for Roosevelt to do an "about face" now toward the "right" or reaction. Such action would lay him open to the charge of hypocrisy by both reactionaries and liberals.

If Borah is to get anywhere with his campaign, he must disavow the support of such reactionaries as Ham Fish, who recently indorsed him. He must get up a constructive forward looking platform with some definite objectives like a plan for solving the problem of 12,000,000 unemployed. Mere defense of the Constitution will not put men and women to work. Plans, not platitudes, would be a good slogan.

The "Bellowers."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Alfio Carta, a correspondent in these columns, questions my Americanism because I did not attach my name to the article signed "An American," appearing in The Post of December 24, in reference to hyphenated "Italian-Americans," but he can not dispute or deny the truths and facts stated therein. The only answer I have for this phase of his complaint is that I do not write letters to The Post merely for the joy and ecstasy of having my friends see my name signed to a newspaper article. My name and address is on file with The Post and anyone interested enough to find out can easily do so by making inquiry at its offices.

No one disputes or even implies that Italy and the United States are not on friendly terms. And if this correspondent wants to know why all this "bellowing" let him refer back to some of the articles sponsored by Mussolini's American bodyguards lauding this steamroller dictator for his great achievements and supporting him with American contributions of good United States coin. He can easily ascertain who has been doing all this "bellowing." Furthermore, if he desires to find out the sentiment of the American people regarding the acts, raids and operations of Mussolini against the Ethiopian people, let him canvass among his neighbors and see the amazing majority who condemn and denounce the acts of this Fascist dictator for his murderous exploitations.

Realities Of Foreign Debts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If there is anything I like better than an eggnog at Christmas it is a lively debate upon a subject of general interest; and it appears that I have excited just such an encounter by my article in The Post of December 25, entitled "No Particular Cheer For Finland," meaning, of course, that Finland is not entitled to any compliments for making her war debt payments in view of the trade balance in her favor out of which to make her payments while all the other debtors have had adverse trade balances.

Well, irrespective of what X. Y. Z., of Clarendon, Va., said in your issue of the 28th and Mr. A. C. Sullivan says today, I still maintain that no debtor is entitled to any particular commendation for paying his debt installment when your trading with him leaves him a balance in his favor 35 times the amount of his payment; or, to state it in dollars and cents, it is an easy matter to pay $186,370 when you furnish $5,400,000 out of which to pay it. That's just what the United States has been doing, while the thoughtless and superficial among us have been whooping and hollowing for little Finland, and some have actually argued that such a settlement with Finland was a part of our policy of settling with our foreign debtors upon the basis of "ability to pay." But the less we say about that phase of the case the better.

The facts are that we have lost $160,000,000 in token payments by nations whose honor and fidelity had never before been questioned, and I am not disposed now to censure them. They are up against it, just as individuals have been, and many still are. I anticipate a satisfactory settlement by our foreign debtors, certainly if we do not persist in stigmatizing them as ingrates and willful defaulters. But we can't advance such a settlement by availing ourselves of every opportunity that presents itself to insult and humiliate them, as the Congress and some individuals are disposed to do.

Furthermore, the fact that these foreign debtors are making great expenditures for their war equipment is no indication of their ability to pay foreign obligations. Mr. Sullivan's article today shows that fatal error. His figures are interesting, but totally meaningless in this connection. We are stepping up our expenditures for war equipment by approximately $1,000,000,000, but such is no index of our ability to discharge a foreign obligation, for the simple reason that this expenditure is effected by a credit arrangement with our own people and does not involve the purchase of any foreign exchange, which must be made by the expenditure of hard or metallic money. So let's keep the realities of this foreign debt situation ever before us when we are disposed to censure defaults on the part of our debtors. Foreign debts are paid in commodities. We built this Nation with foreign capital, but we paid our foreign obligations in commodities, not in money. Our present foreign debtors may pay us in commodities, but they will never pay us in money, for they do not and never will have it with which to pay us.

The Post Impressionist

Twice Twain.

Post Office, Wednesday.

A LETTER from Sculptress Louise Kidder Sparrow asked us the other day whether reminiscences of Samuel Langhorne Clemens were still in order. When we had replied that they were never anything else, she replied:

"I have waited years for the Mark Twain poem you published recently in your Column—the only one he ever wrote!"

And then she told us more about it.

* * *

"As a girl," she writes, "I attended the Quincy Mansion School on the shores of Massachusetts Bay. One evening, Mr. Clemens was our guest. After dinner, he rose to address us.

"'Young ladies,' he began, 'I wish to recite to you a serious poem I once wrote——'

* * *

"We burst into spontaneous gales of laughter. His face registered surprise and chagrin. As soon as the laughter had subsided, however, he began again:

"'But, in all seriousness, young ladies, I do wish to recite my poem to you.'

"Again the gales of uncontrolled laughter.

* * *

"He made a gesture of his hands and shoulders, hopeless and resigned. He said sadly: 'You have missed hearing one of the most beautiful poems ever written.' Whereupon he turned away and resumed his seat at the rear of the platform.

"Our laughter was, of course, even more hilarious than before. The penalty of being a wit is that one is seldom taken seriously."

* * *

Not until hours later did Mrs. Sparrow begin to wonder whether Clemens might not really have had a poem up his sleeve. Then, however, the puzzle loomed large. Moreover, it grew with passing time. "Only now, at long last," she writes, "you have certainly resolved it. There was a poem, and the Post-Impressionist has given it to the world!"

* * *

Nevertheless, she poses another puzzle.

Even had those schoolgirls heard that poem, would their memories have retained it? How much of the success of Mark Twain the speaker depended on the enduring matter of the speech and how much on the passing manner of its delivery?

* * *

For Mrs. Sparrow continues:

"Several years after the incident at the Quincy Mansion School, I was, one afternoon, present, with my mother, at a reception to Mark Twain and to the members of the Boston Authors' Club—of which I was then, at 19, the baby member—in the home of Prof. Hugo Munsterberg.

"Among the guests were Dr. Edward Everett Hale, Julia Ward Howe, Thomas Wentworth Higginson, Trowbridge, and many other distinguished men and women. Jerome K. Jerome was expected, but his train was late; a general discussion arose as to the correct pronunciation of his name—or, rather, names:

"Je-rome K. Je-rome?
"Je-romy K. Je-romy?
"Or Je-rome K. Je-rome?

* * *

"Mark Twain offered his opinion, standing on a chair in the middle of the drawing room so that we could all see him. His abundant hair was now snow white. Beside me, Dr. Hale's broad shoulders shook with mirth as his great frame towered aloft. Near him, Mrs. Howe—short and dumpling under her Dutch bonnet—was laughing like one of those schoolgirls of a previous occasion. Laughter, indeed, followed every word that the speaker uttered.

* * *

"So, on the way home, my mother and I agreed that we must tell my father all about it, at dinner.

"'But can you remember what Mr. Clemens said?' I inquired, suddenly concerned.

"A silence of concentration followed. Then: 'Why—no—not exactely,' my mother admitted.

"And, surprised and annoyed at myself, I had to admit:

"'Neither can I.'

* * *

"The truth turned out to be that, of all the brilliant speech which, so short a time before, had caused so much merriment, we couldn't recall one word. We had laughed, not at what Mark Twain said, but at the way he said it."

* * *

And how was that? As he is quoted by H. Warrington Smyth—which must mean Herbert Warrington Smyth, explorer, who explored the U. S. A. in general and Washington in particular as a delegate to the 1919 International Labor Conference? For, writing to the London Times about a walk with Clemens along the Thames, Mr. Smyth quotes his companion thus:

"Rome is great, Paris is fine, but they ain't got your river . . . Now, why ain't this river of yours covered with boats . . . all day long?"

* * *

The Post-Impressionist's own acquaintance with Mark Twain was of the briefest, but we'll wager any sum you wish—and so, we'll wager, will Mrs. Sparrow wager—that he didn't talk like the "typical Yankee" of this explorer's imagination.

2 Authorities Back Institute Poll on Defense

McSwain, Craig Describe Results as Accurate and Significant.

The results of the poll of the American Institute of Public Opinion on the subject of National Defense, as published in last Sunday's Washington Post, were described yesterday as accurate and significant by two of the Capital's leading military authorities.

Chairman John J. McSwain of the House Military Committee said that, "the result of the American Institute's poll of public opinion as to the feeling of Americans concerning the needs of adequate defense confirms my personal opinions and observations made during a Nation-wide tour this past fall."

General Malin Craig, Army chief of staff, said that "the results of the poll show the people participating in it are on the right track."

Seventy-four per cent of those questioned asked that the Air Force be built up. A total of 54 per cent were in favor of an increased Navy while 48 per cent wanted an increase in Army strength.

Air Needs Stressed.

"While the disturbed condition of the world at large has turned the thoughts of most people to the need for adequate defense generally, a most pronounced expression everywhere is in favor of greatly increasing our air defense forces," Chairman McSwain said.

"Common sense leads the layman to see the power and efficacy of air defense. The economy of air defense when measured in terms of its efficiency impresses the minds of the taxpayer. The cost of constructing and equipping two battleships when invested in aircraft such as bombers, pursuit planes and attack planes would insure this Nation against invasion from any quarter and from any direction, whether by land, by sea or by air," he added.

McSwain expressed enthusiasm over recent moves to build up the general headquarters air force and said he was in favor of the Wilcox bill to provide a ring of air-defense bases around the Nation's border as a defensive move. This measure has passed both houses of Congress. An attempt will be made in the coming session to obtain an appropriation to carry it out.

Mentions Alaska.

"If it is impossible to get all the money for the Wilcox bill bases at one time I would favor building bases in Alaska, Hawaii and the extreme Northwest first," he said.

"It is logical that a large percentage should favor building up American air power," Gen. Craig said. "We do not have enough airplanes, partly because there has been very little procurement of new equipment during the past years."

The Chief of Staff then added:

"However, I do feel that although we are short on numbers in air power, we have the best in planes and pilots."

"But the real test of air power never can be determined untill two first-class powers with modern air branches meet," Gen. Craig stated.

"Then and then only will it be determined what a bombing plane can accomplish and what defensive measures can be offered by the newest in anti-aircraft equipment.

Not Independent.

"The operations in the Ethiopian area show conclusively that powerful and important as an air service is, it is not an independent branch. It cannot capture, hold and supply itself It is a supporting force.

"The only force that can capture, hold and supply itself is the Infantry. Weather conditions cannot stop the Infantry. So a practical soldier realizes that his military force must be well rounded and soundly constructed in all its branches.

"The best assurance against becoming involved in foreign troubles is the maintenance of an adequate and completely equipped Army and Navy," Gen Craig stated.

"Since the air force is our front line it is necessary to maintain it in greater proportionate strength than other branches. We will not have an opportunity to reinforce the Air Corps when an emergency is declared. It must be instantly available."

Spirited opposition to further boosts in military outlays was forecast yesterday in statements issued by four Senators through the National Council for Prevention of War.

Senator Nye (Republican), North Dakota, said that "continuation of the mad armament race in which we are a party can only prolong the day when any measure of disarmament can be won, while Senator King (Democrat), Utah, declared that "there is no justification for the appropriations now sought for military and naval purposes."

Senator Pope (Democrat), Idaho, held it is "regrettable that so large a part of the taxpayers' money must be expended for a military purpose," and continued that "it is very certain that the way to international peace does not lie through constantly increasing armament."

Senator Frazier, North Dakota Republican, expressed the opinion that "our peace-loving people should include in their New Year's resolutions a protest to their members of Congress and to the President against these immense military appropriations."

At the same time the People's Mandate Committee made public a report of an interview with Frank B. Kellogg, former Secretary of State, in which he was quoted as expressing gratification "that people all over the world are becoming more determined that their governments shall live up to the obligations of the (Kellogg-Briand) treaty."

U. S. Flier Missing Day On California Flight

Hamilton Field, Calif., Dec. 31 (AP).—Lieut. J. F. Helms, who left here yesterday in a pursuit plane for March Field, near Riverside, has not been heard from since, Army bombing base officials said today. They expressed fear for his safety, as the plane had a cruising speed of 280 miles an hour and should have reached March Field within two hours after his takeoff at 4 p. m. Belief was expressed that Helms had been forced down some distance from communication. Twelve planes started searching for him.

Unhappy New Year

England Sadly Faces Fact That No Idealism Or Chicanery Of Foreigners Can Explain Away Bungled African Peace Proposal.

By Edward Acheson.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

London.

ENGLAND comes sadly to the end of the old year. The government is accused of unspeakable things—of which it is probably guilty. But its most factless indiscretion, the real source of bitterness which curdles the Christmas spirit, lies in the fact that for once in this rough island's story the British, as a nation, are presented with and forced to gaze upon a picture of themselves as others see them.

And stripped of the habitual English assumptions—assumptions which are apparently quite untenable in the present instance, the portrait turns out to be a pretty sorry affair.

Reasons there are in plenty, but no excuse seems to mitigate a line of it. The unruffled superiority of the average Englishman has been sorely tried.

For, always, in the past London has had recourse to some earnestly held preconceived notions when contemplating her own conduct of foreign affairs as contrasted with the technique employed by the Americans, or by "the Continent." Always these assumptions have proved to be a great comfort. Now suddenly they are no longer available.

The United States, so runs the thesis, invariably makes a mess of things because "it is a new country and doesn't understand the game." Witness the wholly impractical idealism of President Wilson. Ignorance, the British claim, is often more difficult to deal with than chicanery.

* * * *

HOWEVER, chicanery itself is likely to be found on the Continent of Europe. At the moment, of course, France is the chief exporter. But "the foreigner" has forever been tricky. The Spaniard was at one time the handsome, clever, suave villain who could hoodwink the honest plodding Englishman, unless said Englishman kept his sterling moral virtues brightly furbished. Then the Jesuits especially Italian Jesuits, took over the sheep's clothing which hides the wolf. Lately it has been the French.

The Americans, then, were wealthy children playing ardently at a game they didn't understand. The French were shrewd double-crossers who had to be watched every minute. But the British themselves—the British were the "muddlers."

Now the psychology of "muddling" is interesting in that it presupposes a striking contrast. On the intellectual side, a certain dimness, characterized by a lumbering insistance on common sense and a great disdain for anything even suggestive of sophistry. But in the realm of ethics, a bright, hard light; clouded at times, perhaps, by the devilish cleverness of "foreigners" in making England appear to be in the wrong. In the end, by hook, but never by crook, the country's inherent rightness was always extracted from under its bushel and served to shed light unto the whole house.

* * * *

HENCE, even if Machiavelli had been as English as Mr. Pickwick himself, his deviations from the straightest and narrowest would have been traced to a taint of Irish blood, or Scotch, or perhaps Welsh or Manx. Of necessity he couldn't be English. Because the English aren't crafty; they don't look ahead; they just blunder ahead, And when their mistakes have finally brought the world down around their ears—well, they just blunder out of the mess and carry on by the sure light of an unsullied conscience.

So the British like to conceive of themselves. They like to remember that they "conquered half the world in a moment of absent-mindedness." If the Americans had done the conquering it would have been the greed of the immature. Had the French achieved it, no more diabolical machination could have been conceived in a national mind made brilliant by disease. But the British were just absent-minded.

Now, at the of this year of grace, the Cabinet has shattered confidence in the country by seriously compromising those happy assumptions. Before the election, a number of us wrote dispatches plotting the course which the British government would have to follow if the nefarious "Dirty Deal" in Abyssinia were to be consummated. English readers smiled tolerantly, knowing that we "didn't understand England," that we suffered from the foreigners' jaundiced point of view, that we attributed to upright bungling British statesmen a degree of foresight and shrewd calculation which were the earmarks of "the others."

* * * *

OUR hypothesis was that the result of the Peace Ballot and the sudden ardor of the Government for things Genevan did not constitute a mere coincidence, that the "National" Tory party once elected to support collective security, would promptly "sell out" the Abyssinians and the League in return for a strong regime in Italy, thus making the return to the politics of power in Europe a thing assured.

Unfortunately the hypothesis gained general circulation, unfortunately, because, had it not, the Anglo-French peace proposals might even now be light-heartedly dismissed as another instance of the smart Quai d'Orsay leading virtuous but dumb Whitehall up the garden path. In fact one intrepid Tory paper is valiantly but vainly trying to work up a long suffering smile at the villainy of the French.

But with England as a whole that treatment simply won't work. Nothing has been "slipped over" on anyone. The cabinet went into the negotiations with, its eyes open failing to see only one thing, the reaction of the public. The cabinet failed to see exactly that same thing on two former occasions, in the case of the unemployed scales, and in the matter of the private manufacture of arms. In both previous instances it backed down. Presumably the right honorable members thought they could fly this kite, and politely apologize if the exhibition didn't come off.

But they can't. This last bit of "muddling" has too many, far too many, signs of malice aforethought.

* * * *

AND the government knows it. Mr. Baldwin sat like an ailing cod while opposition spokesmen told the House of Commons what they thought of such a betrayal of the League. When he rose to speak the prime minister dove under the woodpile of "public interest" and then gave the whole show away by the vehemence of his denial that Anthony Eden had threatened to resign.

Perhaps he didn't. But it would be interesting to know by whom and how pro bono patriae and loyalty to superiors was successfully balanced against personal integrity.

Viewed from any angle, other than that of the British Isolationists, the Anglo-French proposals are a gargantuan blunder, not only in the wider sense for the world and for England, but even down to the comparatively unimportant aspect of the Tory party and the individual men who headed that party and engineered the negotiations.

The ramifications of the Hoare-Laval intrigue are enormous and wholly unpredictable. But one fact England has learned from the whole unsavory mess, and the lesson is bitter. If this situation had simply "happened," if there were no ulterior motive and innocent Britain had once again been compromised by trickery—then the men who permitted it were not "muddlers," in the fine old tradition. They are simply mentally deficient.

Douglas Fir Workers Get New Year Bonus

Tocoma, Wash., Dec. 31 (AP).—Most plywood factories of the Douglas fir region will say "Happy New Year" to their 6,000 employes with a bonus of 5 cents an hour.

Operators said the plywood industry is enjoying a volume of business much superior to that of the lumber business generally.

Don't Mention It.

Veterans' Chief Calls for Unity In Bonus Fight

Commander Harlan Issues Plea for Conference to Decide on Bill.

A last-minute effort to join all of the major veterans' organizations in a united front behind a single bonus bill was made last night by Commander M. A. Harlan, of the Disabled Americans Veterans.

Harlan moved for a conference of veterans' leaders in Washington early next week, following apparent collapse of several similar plans for joint veterans' action. Invitations were dispatched to Ray Murphy, national commander of the American Legion, and James E. Van Zandt, of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

"At present the greatest threat against payment is the failure of the veterans themselves to agree upon one plan," Harlan said in a statement from El Paso, Tex.

Even as the invitations went out, a new drive was projected behind the Patman bill to pay the bonus in expanded currency. Representative Wright Patman (Democrat), of Texas, author of the measure which passed both houses last session before it bumped into a Presidential veto, conferred yesterday with Speaker Byrns on his plans.

Byrns Favors Compromise.

Byrns is known to favor a compromise measure acceptable to the Administration. Following the conference, Patman said he had given the Speaker no assurances that he would support anything less than the Patman bill.

"I believe sentiment is growing at the Capitol for my measure," Patman said. "There is no desire for new taxes this session, and members tell me that my bill apparently is the only one that will avoid them."

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), Oklahoma, has announced he will attempt to revive the Patman bill in the Senate. The Texan's measure automatically comes to a House vote January 13. He has called a meeting of his House bonus steering committee of 21 for tomorrow.

Senator Frederic Steiwer (Republican), Oregon, recently informally invited all of the veteran leaders to meet with him to work out an acceptable measure. All but Commander Murphy were said to have accepted. Steiwer is co-author with Senator James Byrnes (Democrat), South Carolina, of a compromise bill for payment of the veterans in bonds maturing in 1938, but having a present cash value of 98 per cent of full bonus payment.

"For years the D. A. V. remained mute on the so-called bonus issue," Harlan said in his statement yesterday. "We felt—and still feel—that the principal obligation of any veterans' organization and, indeed, the country generally, is for adequate care of those disabled in war.

"However, since Federal expenditures are now being made on unprecedented scales, we decided that aside from all other considerations the cashing of the certificates would be good business. They must be paid in ten years at the latest, and if billions are now being spent in not liquidating an admitted debt, the debt must later be paid. Surely the payments will obtain as wide a distribution through hundreds of thousands of veterans as any plan of relief, so far as reaching every State, county and city is concerned."

Youth Urged to Shun Foreign War Service

Kansas City, Dec. 31 (AP).—The National Student Federation of America adopted a resolution today urging American youth not to go beyond the borders of the 48 States to participate in a war with a foreign power.

House Leaders Confer on Bonus Bill

Underwood & Underwood.

Finance Heads Of U.S., Mexico Discuss Silver

By the Associated Press.

Mexico's perturbation at the panicky condition of world silver markets was placed before Secretary Morgenthau yesterday by its finance minister, Eduardo Saurez.

With prices off 15 cents since the Treasury quit buying huge quantities of the metal in principal financial centers, the two began a series of conferences which may have an important bearing on the future of silver in the Mexican monetary system.

For nearly an hour, they and their aids conferred in Morgenthau's office. Saurez declined to comment as he left, but Morgenthau told newsmen they had had a "successful talk in preliminary conversations."

Senators from silver-producing States, as well as diplomatic and Treasury officials, will meet the Mexican emissary at a dinner to be given by Morgenthau tonight. A general discussion of the problems of silver is expected.

Since Mexican mines produce more silver than those of any other country, that government is vitally concerned over the price to be paid for the metal. In addition, and equally important, is the future of the Mexican monetary system.

At present the latter is undergoing a slow transition from a base of silver to one of gold. It is now on a bimetallic basis, much as is the United States, although its monetary reserves are still predominantly silver.

Observers suggested yesterday that it would be to the Treasury's advantage to dissuade Mexico from swinging too far away from silver. Should she abandon silver entirely, the result would find the United States and its big purchasing program more isolated than ever.

Consequently, there was some speculation whether the conferences might not find the Treasury offering to swap American gold, of which there is an oversupply, for a portion, but only a portion, of Mexico's silver reserves.

Supreme Court Again Breaks With Past; Names 'Press Agent'

By the Associated Press.

The Supreme Court made another surrender yesterday to a modern demand—and appointed a "press-contact man," the tribunal's first in the 146 years of its existence.

Veteran court employes, who explained the appointment in the absence of an official announcement, emphasized that the new official is neither a "press agent" nor a "public relations counsellor."

And contrasting with younger Government agencies, where "press agents" seldom are known by that title, the court attaches added that there would be no "handouts" or "press releases."

They explained that Nelson A. Potter, of the clerk's staff, had been designated to handle queries from hundreds of news writers seeking information on court moves that have captured public attention, especially since the New Deal controversies began pouring into the tribunal.

Potter has worked in the clerk's office for eight years, and recently had been "minute clerk." He now will devote all his time to the press.

Clerk Charles Elmore Cropley said Potter had been designated as a result of numerous requests made by a committee of news writers. This group, he said, had met several times in recent months with Chief Justice Hughes for informal conferences on the request.

Roosevelt to Offer Program

arms, ammunition and implements of war, initially imposed against two or more belligerents should be extended to other nations that subsequently enter the conflict.

McReynolds said the only change for the existing mandatory section of the law, aside from making it permanent, that he was considering was to exempt Latin-American nations from its requirements. He thought this might be necessary because of this country's obligations under the Monroe Doctrine.

McReynolds, however, made clear that he was speaking for himself and was not undertaking to reflect what the President had in mind. But McReynolds has championed the Administration side in this controversy so ardently that he is likely to see eye to eye with the President and Secretary Hull.

It is known that the Administration would not object seriously to having made permanent and mandatory embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war, as it is now written, if the President had discretion to include in the list commodities not now classified as arms.

Plans Discussed.

Likewise it is known that the President and Secretary Hull would like to have authority to take effective steps to prevent wars developing as well as to keep this country free of them once they start. They do not want this power, it is contended, to make League of Nations sanctions effective or to punish aggressors, but because they believe war anywhere in the world is detrimental to this country's welfare.

Consequently, Administration circles have had under discussion ways by which this country could contribute to preventing war. One plan discussed would be to give the President authority to place quotas in advance of belligerency on exports of essential war materials to countries suspected of preparing for war. Such quotas would limit shipments to the level of normal peace-time exports to the particular country under the plan.

The necessity for such action is regarded as having been well demonstrated by the Italo-Ethiopian conflict. For many months prior to the outbreak of actual hostilities in East Africa, Italy was purchasing in abnormal volume automobiles, trucks, oil, scrap iron and copper in this country, obviously in preparation for the conflict.

Italian Case Cited.

This Government was without power to stop this abnormal trade, held by State Department authorities to be just as much war trade as that taking place after hostilities started, even as Italy's intentions were clear to all the world. Indeed, this incident is held to demonstrate that any country, by making advance preparations, easily could thwart, in the way of getting supplies, the most rigid neutrality plan adopted—the more probability that advance preparations would be made.

In seeking to draft into legislation the idea of restricting trade in essential war materials in advance of belligerency, several major obstacles have been encountered. One is to find phraseology to define the authority of the President, without leaving him free to direct such restrictions at one country to the detriment of another. The Administration is fully aware that it cannot get support in Congress for any proposal that might be used to discriminate against one or more nations preparing for war or involved in conflict.

Still another obstacle to the plan is that of making a quota system workable. In order to stop exports to a given country after a certain volume has been shipped, the Government in all probability would have to set up an export trade board, and in order to give American enterprises a fair opportunity to obtain such trade, apportion it among the applicants on a basis similar to that used two years ago when liquor and wine imports were subjected to quotas.

1936 Forecast as 'Better Year'

president of the American Federation of Labor.

"The indications are that the improvement in economic and industrial conditions which set in during the present year will continue during 1936," he said. "The increase in the production and sale of consumers goods will in all probability be further stimulated and accelerated by an increase in demand for capital goods."

New Year "Fateful."

Green pointed out, however, that the New Year would be "fateful" for labor. He referred particularly to legal tests of the Wagner, Guffey and social security acts. The chief economic problem, he said, will continue to be employment. He said labor was determined to press harder than ever for a shorter work week and a shorter work day.

Secretary Perkins said she was looking forward to greater gains in the heavy industries. Reviewing the past year, she said that 5,200,000 persons who were without jobs at the low point in the depression are now at work. The weekly pay roll in October, she said, was $112,000,000 greater than the weekly pay roll in March of 1933.

"Such a substantial increase in purchasing power has increased the activities of industry," she added.

Profits Vital, She Says.

"Fair and continued profits are of vital importance in industry, but good steady wages for workers and fair prices for the produce of farmers are also necessary to a sound prosperity."

Secretary Roper summed up the situation in these words:

"On the basis of the broad gains recorded in the economic and social life of the Nation in 1935 and in vie of the cumulative strength of the recovery forces, business and industry should now move forward courageously in the New Year with long-term programs, looking forard to sound and stable progress."

Most optimistic of all was Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation. He said:

"America is out of the depression right now. It is really a thing of the past. We have just the aftermath of the depression to clean up. We are behind in construction work in America, and I believe that building will be the big leader in 1936."

"Resolutions" Offered.

Robert L. Lund, chairman of the board of the National Association of Manufacturers, presented these "resolutions" for business:

"Encouragement of a better understanding among Government, industry, labor and the public to speed recovery.

"Seeking to re-employ the idle millions at stable wages and secure jobs within private enterprise.

"Encouragement of the expansion of private enterprise and the flow of investment capital."

The transportation industry found business improving. M. W. Clement, president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, said he believed "the forces of recovery are at work and will continue to influence improvement in general business activity."

Eugene Vidal, director of air commerce of the Commerce Department, predicted that "1936 should be the beginning of a great expansion in every phase of aviation—probably greater than even those in the industry now vision."

Airplanes in 1935 carried 860,000 passengers, an increase of 51 per cent over 1933, the previous peak year, Vidal said. Express business increased 55 per cent over 1934 and air mail almost doubled. Miles flown by air lines were 60,000,000, the highest total in American air line history.

The United States will start the new year by embarking on three new foreign trade agreements. They include those negotiated with Canada and Brazil and an agreement with France whereby that government will abolish "double taxation" on American business.

The Chamber of Commerce, in a statement, pointed to the growing importance of export trade with the British Empire. In the January-September period of 1934, the chamber reported, American sales to empire countries constituted 42.4 percent of our total exports, compared with 39.1 per cent in 1934.

The review said that "exports to nearly three-fourths of our best customers for the first three-quarters exceeded those for the same part of last year."

From Harry L. Hopkins, who has the major responsibility in seeing that the unemployed get all possible help, came an expression of gratification that millions of able-bodied Americans had been transferred from the dole to "self-respect-restoring jobs."

"It was last January," he said, "that President Roosevelt asked Congress for the $4,000,000,000 appropriation to end this business of relief.'

"That objective has now been attained, and I call on every American to look about his community and see the difference in the morale of those who formerly were consigned to idleness and despair."

Supreme Court Brief Attacks Long Press Tax

Louisiana Publishers Protest Advertising Levy as Unconstitutional.

By the Associated Press.

A group of Louisiana publishers told the Supreme Court yesterday that "abridgement of the right to have a free press" motivated the one-time Huey Long-dominated Louisiana Legislature in an effort to tax advertising.

They asserted in a brief filed with the Supreme Court that "a legislature which has the power to levy a direct tax upon the press has the power not only to control it, but to destroy it."

The document was presented by 13 publishers preparatory to arguments in a few weeks on an appeal by State officials from a decision by a three-judge Federal District Court of Louisiana holding the 1934 act unconstitutional.

"The real and underlying purpose of the legislation," the brief asserted, "is to punish these newspapers opposed to the dominant political faction in the State and serve on them notice of further reprisals in the event of continued opposition."

Long, who was assassinated at Baton Rouge, while serving as United States Senator, was quoted in the brief as saying "the lying newspapers * * * have never paid any license to do business like everybody else does."

"It is a system," he was quoted as saying, "that these big Louisiana newspapers tell a lie every time they make a dollar. This tax should be called a tax on lying. 2 cents a lie.

The 2 per cent gross receipts tax was imposed on newspaper, magazine and motion picture advertisements in publications in the State having a weekly circulation of more than 20,000.

Because of this limitation, the publishers said the legislation applied to only 13 papers. They added that 12 of these were "active in their opposition to the dominant political group in the State, which group controlled the Legislature and at whose citates the Legislature passed this law."

The thirteenth newspaper was the Lake Charles American-Press. The brief said Long had asserted that an attempt was made to exempt it from the tax and "we would have done it if we could."

This paper, which later was said to have opposed the Long policies, joined in attacking the law.

The legislation was said to "arbitrarily discriminate" against the publishers by exempting from taxation such other advertising media as radio broadcasting, out-door advertising, and street car placards.

Ex-Peruvian Consul Freed of Impersonation

Chicago, Dec. 31 (AP).—Jorge M. Chavarri, professor of Spanish at the University of Toledo, of Toledo, Ohio, was dismissed of charges of impersonating a diplomatic officer by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker today for lack of evidence.

He was appointed Peruvian consul in Chicago in 1930. Several weeks ago Federal agents arrested him in Toledo on complaints he had continued to transact consular business after a successor to him had been appointed.

France to Continue Foodstuff Quotas

Paris, Dec. 31 (AP).—France indicated today it will continue restrictions on foreign foodstuffs in 1936, limiting the United States apple and pear quota to 22,000 tons for the first quarter of the year.

Grains, meats, fats and oils also are restricted in the minister of agriculture's quota chart, with no quotas for tinned meats and fresh frozen beef. The few changes in the 1935 quotas all were slight reductions.

St. Louis, Dec. 31 (AP).—Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, today denounced teachers' oath bills as "futile and silly" and as "casting an undeserved reflection on the teaching profession."

Damage was estimated by firemen as $75,000.

New York, Dec. 31 (AP).—Caleb Jones Milne 4th, who confessed that his "kidnaping" was a hoax to further his theatrical and literary ambitions, was released today from the Federal House of Detention after his father posted a $7,500 bond.

Milne will appear before Commissioner Cotter January 9 for hearing on a charge that he attempted to extort money by use of the mails from his wealthy grandfather, Caleb Milne, jr., of Philadelphia.

League Is Given Soviet Protest On Uruguayans

Moscow Complains After Diplomatic Relations Are Canceled.

By the Associated Press.

Moscow, Dec. 31.—Soviet Russia formally protested to the League of Nations tonight that Uruguay had violated the League Covenant by breaking off diplomatic relations with Moscow.

The Soviet Union, it was announced, will boycott Uruguayan products.

A note sent to the secretary general of the League of Nations complained that Uruguay did not submit its complaints to the League for arbitration nor to the Soviet Union.

No purchases of goods from Uruguay will be made after tomorrow and a Soviet trade organization in Montevideo is to be liquidated immediately.

The note asserted that Uruguay violated Article XII of the Covenant and the complaint was made under provisions of paragraph 2, Article XI of the Covenant.

(Uruguay, only South American nation to recognize the Soviet, broke relations last week, charging that the legation in Montevideo was directing subversive activity throughout South America and was behind the recent Leftist revolt in Brazil.)

(The Soviet press charged that the reason for the action was that Russia refused to enter a trade agreement Uruguay desired.)

John C. Letts, Stores Founder, Is Dead at 74

Ex-President of Sanitary Grocery Chain Succumbs at Capital Home.

John Cowen Letts, 74, founder and former president of the Sanitary Grocery stores, died yesterday at his home, 3200 Ellicott street northwest, after a short illness. Mr. Letts was a prominent figure in both business and financial circles for years. In later life, however, he became more interested in philanthropic endeavors, especially in connection with physical development of young children.

In his youth he was taken sick and physicians gave him six months to live. He felt his only chance was to leave home and live out of doors.

He went to Texas, where he lived the life of a cowboy. He improved in health and after some time became completely well. Later when he was in a position to help local charities he gave the Washington boys a chance to enjoy the out-of-doors life by which he regained his health.

When he had recovered sufficiently he returned to work in the city. For some years he was connected with the grocery business, first in St. Joseph, Mo., and later in Iowa.

In 1909 he came to this city and founded a grocery store. Out of this there gradually grew up the chain known as the Sanitary Grocery Stores.

Assisted Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Letts held executive positions in many organizations here. In June, 1927, he retired from the presidency of Sanitary Grocery Stores. After that he became more interested in the Y. M. C. A., of which he was a member of the board of trustees and the advisory board of the Washington branch.

To further this society's work in developing the youth he donated a large tract of land on Rhodes River, near Annapolis. This was converted into a summer camp and named "Camp Letts" in his honor.

In this camp many of the poorer children of Washington were able to rest and play, enjoying the outdoor life which had helped Mr. Letts years before. The boys in the camp participated in swimming, running, boating and all other forms of sport. At the end of the year there was always a big celebration and sometimes Mr. Letts would receive a gift the campers had made for him.

Two years ago Mr. Letts contributed a large sum of money to be used in constructing a new dining room for the Rhodes River Camp, and it was his generosity over a period of years which allowed the camp to expand to its present size.

Mr. Letts also donated funds to aid in purchase of a building next to Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church to serve as a meeting place and social center for young people of the church. The hall is named the John Letts Building.

Among other offices held, Mr. Letts was president of the board of American University, a director of the Washington Loan & Trust Co. and a member of the board of the Dickson Home. He also was a member of the board of the Swartzell Methodist Home and an officer of Foundry Church.

Affiliated With Clubs.

He was a member of many Washington clubs and organizations, including the Washington Board of Trade, Chevy Chase Club, Columbia Country Club, University Club, Racquet Club and the Elks and Masons. He was a member and former director of the Rotary Club.

In California, where he sometimes spent the winter, he was a member of the San Gabriel Country Club and the Annandale Golf Club, of Pasadena.

Mr. Letts was born in Wenona, Ill., the son of the late Noah H. and Herma Cowen Letts. His early education was received in the public schools of Afton, Iowa.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ida Lewis Letts; two daughters, Mrs. W. M. Guthrie, of this city, and Mrs. F. Henry Jones, of San Francisco; a sister, Mrs. Henry Ream, of Yates Center, Kans., and two granddaughters, Emilie Letts Jones and Catherine Ann Guthrie.

Funeral services will be held conducted at his home Friday by the Rev. Dr. Fredrick Brown Harris, pastor of Foundry Methodist Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Death Stills Sisters Inseparable in Life

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., Dec. 31.—The elite gathered again today at stately Montgomery Place, but stilled was the gayety that once marked their coming to the historic old mansion.

The Montgomery sisters—mistresses of the high-columned, antebellum home—were "at home" for the last time.

Inseparable in life, they were inseparable in death. Mrs. Julia Montgomery Doyle, 84, died Sunday in the old homestead. Mrs. Jean Montgomery Jones, 81, who had nursed her through years of illness, died 24 hours later.

At services today, strangely contrasting with the gay assemblages of society of the Old South, the lives of the two women whose deaths severed a link with a gay and colorful past were solemnly extolled.

Society came again to the mansion where, as debutantes and as matrons, the soft-voiced sisters served as hostesses to the blue bloods of the South and visiting English aristocracy.

New Clarendon Liquor Store's Business Heavy

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 500. Clarendon, Va.

A report released by the State Alcoholic Beverage Control Board shows the store opened in Clarendon December 20 did a total of $7,059.50 business for the first four days of its operation.

The report also reveals Virginians spent $68,363 more for legal liquor the four days preceeding Christmas in 1935 than they did during the same period in 1934.

The four-day sales in 1935 for the 68 stores in the State totaled $608,343 as compared with $534,980 for the same period in 1934, when there were 66 stores.

With the supply running low at the Clarendon store, 120 cases were received from Richmond yesterday.

Law and order has prevailed throughout Arlington County during the last year and fewer prisoners have been confined in the county jail than since the first days of prohibition, declared Sheriff Howard B. Fields yesterday.

The new county board, consisting of Mrs. Elizabeth B. Magruder, William E. A. McShea, George N. Yeatman, Freeland Chew and William P. Ames, will meet today at the courthouse at 9 a. m. The board will complete its organization, name a county manager and elect a chairman.

The new officers of the Kiwanis Club will be installed at a special luncheon meeting at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Washington Golf and Country Club. The ceremonies will be conducted by Edwin Hill, international trustee.

Those to be installed are Dr. Lamar Harris, president; Charles W. Smith, immediate vice president; Lyman M. Kelley, first vice president; Harold Whittle, second vice president; Earl English, treasurer; Frank Rowe, secretary.

After questioning Mrs. Costelo's husband, John Costelo, a civilian employe at the post, and examining their home, justice agents announced the belief that the woman shot herself.

Mrs. Costelo was shot last Thursday night. She left the supper table and a few minutes later her husband said he heard a shot.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Past . . . Present . . . Future . . . in The Post's

ANNUAL BUSINESS REVIEW

ARTICLES by authoritative minds in every branch of business, finance and economics will be included. Among them:

● ROBERT B. WARREN, economist with Case, Pomeroy & Co., New York, discussing the major problem of excess reserves. Says he: "The year . . . closes on an unfamiliar note. In recent years, discussion has largely resolved around proposals for expanding credit. . . . This year the active discussion centers on the general theme of contracting the basis of credit . . . restraining further expansion."

● ROBERT V. FLEMING, president of the American Bankers Association, summarizing the year-end banking situation. Says he: "A major factor in bringing about greater business activity . . . would be to remove as far as possible any uncertainties surrounding the rules under which business is to operate."

● JOHN T. MADDEN, dean of the New York University School of Commerce and director of the Institute of International Finance, writing on investment banking. Says he: "Prospects for new financing during 1936 are definitely the best since 1929. The supply of liquid capital available . . . is as plentiful as it has ever been in this country."

● MARCUS NADLER, Professor of Finance, New York University, analyzing the gold problem. Says he: " . . . 1935 was marked by a tremendous inflow of foreign gold into the United States, by a record world production of new gold and by the continued heavy disgorging of gold from hoarding. . . . It is clear . . . that the increase in the gold stocks of the United States has been chiefly at the expense of the European countries."

● ANNA P. YOUNGMAN, financial editorial writer of The Washington Post, declaring that Federal thrift is imperative. Says she: "If the budget is to be balanced at any time in the near future . . . drastic reductions must be made in governmental outlays. . . . Recovery and relief spending must be sharply curtailed. . . . There is no excuse for postponing (this) action. . . ."

● LAWRENCE B. MANN, discussing commodity prices, past and future. Says he: " . . . Under (present) conditions, there seems to be decreasing justification for the continuance of the AAA program of burdening processors and consumers with heavy taxes for the purpose of raising revenue for farmer benefit payments."

● DR. JULES I. BOGEN, editor of the New York Journal of Commerce, explaining the course of security prices during the year and the present trends in the markets. Says he: "The last nine months of 1935 . . . witnessed the most protracted and extensive recovery in stock prices since the low point of the depression was touched. . . . This advance spells a general revival of confidence."

● ROGER W. BABSON, head of the Babson Institute, "bullish for business in 1936," giving his forecast with specific predictions. Says he: "Not on any year-end since the late twenties have I felt surer than I do today that plans could be laid on the basis of better business during the coming twelve months. Regardless of elections, the tide of business is running and nothing can stop it."

German Envoy Dies in France At Age of 52

Ambassador at Paris Had Occupied Post Since 1932.

Roland Koester, German Ambassador to France, died of pneumonia yesterday in the American Hotel in Paris, the United Press reported.

Koester was 52 years old. He had occupied the important diplomatic post since 1932.

Two days ago he returned to Paris from Munich, where he had gone for his health, with a cold contracted en route. Koester had been ailing since last summer when he went to Munich to consult specialists.

Only recently it was reported that Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler planned to recall him, presumably because of his failing health. It also was suggested, however, that Hitler wished to install Joachim Ribbentrop, minister without portfolio, to hasten a Franco-German rapprochement before ratification of the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance pact.

Koester, an educator of note, was born at Mannheim in 1883. In 1914 he began his diplomatic career, serving as a legation secretary. He had held diplomatic posts at The Hague, Prague and Oslo, coming to Paris at the height of the unrest in Germany.

Funeral Set Today For Mrs. Schickler

Mrs. Katherine M. Aue Schickler, 71, lifelong resident of the District and member of the Order of the Eastern Star, Brightwood Chapter, died yesterday morning from a paralytic stroke at her residence, 1300 Emerson street northwest. She had been ill only a few days.

Born in 1864, she was educated in the District schools, and married to John Schickler, proprietor of a bakery at the corner of Georgia avenue and Morton street, for more than 30 years. He died several years ago. She was a member of Zion Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Surviving are five children, Minnie, John, Fred, Katherine and Clara Schickler; three brothers, Frederick, William and John Schickler, and three sisters, Mrs. Augusta Berger, Mrs. Emma Young and Mrs. Caroline Rizzo.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. from her late residence. Interment will be in Prospect Hill Cemetery.

Mary L. R. Wood Dies in Chevy Chase

Mrs. Mary Lettwich Rawlings Wood, wife of John Sumner Wood, attorney, and a resident of the District since girlhood, died yesterday after an illness of several days at her home at 7202 Chatham road, Chevy Chase, Md.

She attended Central High School here, Belmont College, Nashville, Tenn.; Virginia College, Roanoke, Va., and George Washington University. She was a member of Sigma Kappa Sorority of the latter university.

A member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, Mrs. Wood for many years had been an active worker in primary work in the Francis Asbury Methodist Episcopal Church South and the Chevy Chase Methodist Episcopal Church.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by three young sons, John Sumner Wood, jr., David E. and Judson Rawlings Wood. Funeral services will be announced later.

peror Haile Selassie, to have been distinguished by the Italian airmen, Red Cross officials asserted. The doctors were accompanying Ras Desta in his march toward Dolo, where a bloody encounter was expected shortly.

The camp virtually was demolished. Tents were rent asunder and medical supplies were ground to powder. The bombs destroyed the only medical unit available between the bombarded encampment and Nigella, 223 miles northwest. Ras Desta's huge army now must face the Italians without aid for the wounded.

The Canadian doctor, Dr. Ralph Hooper, of Toronto, was assigned to Ras Desta's forces, but was reported camped much farther east than the Swedes.

A telegram to the Red Cross from Ras Desta asserted the medical unit was completely isolated from the Ethiopian fighting forces and could not have been struck by mistake in an attack on the troops.

Three Boys Rescued From 200-Ft. Ledge

Sunland, Calif., Dec. 31 (AP).—Three small boys, marooned on a rocky ledge 200-feet above the floor of Oliver Canyon, near Foothill boulevard, were rescued by Los Angeles County fire patrolmen today.

The boys, Wayne Bradford, 12; his brother, James, 10, and Carl Lindquist, 11, lost their way yesterday on a hike from their Sunland homes. An alarm from the frightened parents sent 30 CCC workers on a search at nightfall. Ropes and ladders were used to bring the boys to safety.

Samuel Tannahill Dies; Democratic Leader

Lewiston, Idaho, Dec. 31 (AP).—Death has ended the career of Samuel O. Tannahill, 67, Democratic national committeeman from Idaho and prominent as an attorney and public official in central Idaho for almost 50 years.

He died at his home here last night after a cerebral hemorrhage. Tannahill was elected to the Democratic national committee in 1932.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

MANY gains for Government employes were achieved in 1935.

First on the list, of course, was the full restoration of pay, obtained early in the last session of Congress. Perhaps the next in importance was the adoption of the Mead bill which provided a 40-hour week for some 250,000 Federal employes, including the custodial workers of the Postoffice Department.

BAKER.

Important from the merit system point of view was the initiation by the American Federation of Government Employes, in cooperation with the Civil Service Commission, of a suitable observance of National Civil Service Week, commemorating the adoption of the national civil service act of January 16, 1883, and calling attention to the great value of this legislation on the grounds of efficiency and economy in Government service. This observance will be made an annual event and will be marked this year by a large number of organizations, including the General Federation of Women's Clubs, the National League of Women Voters, the American Federation of Labor, the Disabled American Veterans, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, the American Farm Bureau Federation and the Civil Service Assembly.

The bills to restore annual leave to 30 days and to make sick leave cumulative were pushed through the House, and now await action in the Senate.

The Celler bill to eliminate Section 213 (marriage clause of the economy act) was favorably reported by the House Civil Service Committee. Other restrictive features of the so-called economy act expired on June 30.

Extensive hearings were held on the Sirovich bill, now broken up into four bills, designed to extend the merit system, extend classification to the field, liberalize the retirement law, and set up a board of appeals.

The Civil Service Commission in its annual report recommended the first three points substantially as they are covered by the new bills. It is also interesting that the efficiency rating system was changed after hearings on the Sirovich bill had shown its unpopularity.

The Gore amendment, which would have placed all key jobs in the Government service outside the civil service, was blocked after a vigorous fight.

Despite growing rumors of an "economy wave" in the impending session of Congress, prospects for improvement in Federal personnel conditions are regarded as much brighter than in years.

Comptroller General McCarl has approved an additional allotment of $10,000,000 for distribution among the States to further work projects for youths between 16 and 25. An allotment of $10,000,000 already has been made to the National Youth Administration for similar youth work projects, according to Aubrey Williams, executive director of the NYA.

THE Bureau of Standards is a receptacle for varied and unusual problems, but seldom is there submitted to it a more curious puzzle than "The Mystery of the Knitting Needles." Here is the plot:

A citizeness had kept a quantity of linen for several years in the drawer of a sewing cabinet. One piece had been hemmed as a napkin, was so used and sent to the laundry. When it came back there were large, symmetrically placed holes along the folds. Instead of blaming the laundry the owner resolved to investigate.

The location and nature of the holes showed the damage was done when the napkin was folded. No chemicals were found which would account for the damage. Other pieces of the linen, unlaundered, were found to have deteriorated greatly. In some places they were brittle and fell into powder when rubbed.

The plot thickens. Several knitting needles stored in the same drawer were also found to be weak and brittle. Observation of this led to solution of the mystery. The needles were found to be made of cellulose nitrate plastic.

Now cellulose nitrate is not very stable, as it liberates oxides of nitrogen when it deteriorates, and these oxides have a bad effect on textiles in a still air space. The linen was acid in reaction and gave a strong test for nitrate ion. The evidence seemed conclusive that nitric acid formed from the gases given off by decomposition of the cellulose nitrate needles attacked the linen over a period of time and was the cause of the damage.

Quick, Watson, another needle!

The huge scope of the CCC is shown in a recent report of Robert Fechner, director of the Emergency Conservation work. A total of $29,375,938 was spent in eight months for machinery and vehicles, including about 25,000 trucks, 1,700 tractors, 1,145 tractor trail builders, and other items of CCC equipment.

Fechner also praised the CCC crews in their efforts for forest-fire prevention and said that the Forest Service reported fire losses were among the lowest on record. He cited construction of 65,000 miles of truck trails, 2,428 lookout houses and towers, and 39,121 miles of telephone lines as outstanding forest-fire prevention activities.

31 Awarded Honors.

Thirty-one officers of the Medical Corps were given diplomas last week for the completion of the 1935 session of the basic graduate class of the Army Medical School. At the exercises held in the Army Medical Center, Dr. Hugh S. Cumming, surgeon general of the Public Health Service, delivered the main address.

Venezuelans Pick Contreras Amid Disorder

War Minister to Succeed Gomez; Police Needed to Disperse Mob.

By the Associated Press.

Port-of-Spain, Trinidad, Dec. 31. Amid a near-riot in Venezuela's House of Congress, Minister of War Eleazar Lopez Contreras today was elected president of the republic to succeed the late Gen. Juan Vicente Gomez, according to reports here.

A mob of shouting spectators had to be removed by force from the building before the congress could name Lopez as temporary successor to the aged dictator, who died two weeks ago after 27 years of uninterrupted rule.

The minister of war, acting president since Gomez died, will serve until Gomez' term expires in April. He was one of the chief lieutenants of the 71-year-old late president, and it was his firm hand that kept down revolution after Gomez' death.

That resentment against the Gomez regime has not cooled completely, however, was indicated at the minister's election this morning. As the congress opened, an uproarious mob invaded the gallery and kept up a continual shouting through the preliminaries.

Finally, one of their number was allowed to address the legislators. In a long speech, he charged that the congress was sitting unconstitutionally, that its members had not been elected legally, and that they were all personal friends of the dead dictator.

When he called for an immediate general election, the mob began shouting its claims again. Finally, police were called to eject the crowd from the building.

Without further disturbance, Lopez was elected, and a committee named to notify him. He was expected to announce his cabinet shortly.

48 Cargo Vessels Tied Up on Coast

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Dec. 31.—Landlocked by labor disputes, 48 cargo vessels were tied up tonight in Pacific Coast ports.

Two of the harbor-bound ships are deep sea craft and the other 46 are in the coastwise trade.

The coastwise ships, engaged in what commonly is called the steam schooner trade, carry mostly lumber, although some cargo of other types also is taken aboard.

Demands of seamen on these vessels for a six-hour day in port with overtime ranging from 70 cents to $1 an hour is the basis of the dispute, which has tied up most of the vessels for several weeks.

Anti-Trust Law Clarification Sought in Court

Stockholder Says Armour Company Is Violating Consent Decree.

A clarification of the terms of the famous "packers' consent decree" of 1920, by which the Nation's leading packing corporations agreed to divest themselves of certain holdings in order to comply with the anti-trust laws, was sought in the District Supreme Court yesterday by Fred J. Leuckel, of Trenton, N. J., who described himself as being one of the five largest stockholders of Armour & Co.

Leuckel charged that the widespread scope of the Armour interests constituted a monopoly and a violation of the decree which rendered it liable to prosecution.

The consent decree provides the large packers must divest themselves of their holdings in capital stock, or any other interest, in any public stockyards, stockyards terminal railroads, stockyards market newspapers, and stockyards market journals.

Through Attorney Marcus Borchardt, Leuckel alleged the company, its officers or directors were violating the decree by directly or indirectly, owning large blocks of capital stock in banned affiliates, and in controlling certain stockyard market companies and stockyard market railroads. His petition to intervene asked that the Armour company be required to make a full disclosure of its holdings and then, in the event any are found that violate either the letter or spirit of the decree, that such interests be divorced from the parent company.

Meantime, Justice Jennings Bailey gave a memorandum opinion in which he declined to permit the United States Wholesale Grocery Association to intervene in the case.

The United Company, it was shown, was successor company to the American Wholesale Grocers Association and the National Wholesale Grocers Association, which were allowed to intervene several years ago during hearings on a petition by the packers in which they sought a modification of the rigid terms of the decree.

Justice Bailey refused permission to intervene on the grounds that no further action in the case is contemplated at this time. The company suggested in its petition that, since it was the result of an amalgamation of the two companies that did intervene, it should be placed on the same footing.

Arguments on Leuckel's request to intervene will be heard late this month.

Wrong Address Used In Theft Gang Story

In The Post of Monday it was reported that Eddie Hawkins, 25, charged with housebreaking in connection with activities of an alleged gang of burglars, lived at 709 Kenyon street northwest. This was erroneous.

Broadway

By Ed Sullivan

New York, Dec. 31.

IN November, 1925, a bit more than ten years ago, Heavyweight Champion Jack Dempsey played a week in vaudeville at Loew's State Theater . . . And rolled up the greatest gross in the theater's history, a box office total of $40,100 . . . For ten years, the greatest names and the most compelling box office draws in vaudeville and musical comedy have tried to knock off the Dempsey record, without success . . . Stumbling block upsetting all challengers has been the change in prices, for when Dempsey played the house and set up an all-time high, matinee and evening prices were almost double what they have been since the market crash of 1929 . . . Then last Friday a new show went into the State, a show that looked definitely like a record-breaker because it was teamed with the Marx Brothers' picture, "A Night at the Opera" . . . All over the Stem, the betting started . . . Odds of two to one were offered and taken . . . And since Friday, those of us who are in the show have learned what it's like to oppose Jack Dempsey, even on a stage, where he can't hit you with left hooks.

• • • •

On the opening show of the week we ran $34 behind Dempsel's all-time record . . . We caught and passed him on the second show of the day, ran neck and neck the rest of the day, and finished the opening Friday $76 ahead of him . . . To do it every attendance record of the theater had to be wrecked, for we played to 17,000 people in five shows . . . Saturday strengthened the advantage . . . On Sunday he pulled ahead of us by $17, but when the first three days were finished we were leading by several hundred dollars in 15 shows . . . "Only a blizzard can beat you out of the record," Marvin Schenck and Carl Levi assured us Sunday morning . . . The Ritz Brothers, the Lathrop Brothers, the Frazee Sisters, Ella Logan, Virginia Lee, Russell Swan, the extras, the Ruby-Zwerling band and the stage hands were in a ferment of excitement . . . At 5 o'clock Sunday, to our horror, it started snowing, and as this is written, it is still snowing . . . "You can spot Dempsey one snowstorm and still beat him," decided Manager Al Rosen, "so long as you get decent weather for New Year's" . . . The tension along the Stem is terrific . . . A snowstorm hasn't created such excitement since the blizzard of 1888 . . . Within 24 hours the bid for a new record will be decided . . . The doctors at the bedside will send out hourly bulletins . . . Odds on Dempsey have shifted to 2½ to 1.

Interesting to survey Broadway at other New Year's . . . In 1915, smash-hit musical of the town was the Ziegfeld "Follies" at the New Amsterdam . . . The cast included Bert Williams, great colored comic; W. C. Fields, Ed Wynn, Leon Errol, Ina Claire, Olive Thomas, Mae Murray and Justine Johnson . . . Twenty years later, W. C. Fields, Wynn, Errol and Ina Claire still are headliners . . . Mae Murray, as slim as ever, can be found nightly at El Morocco dancing with sleek, black-haired escorts . . . Bert Williams and Olive Thomas have passed along . . . Justine Johnson is now Mrs. Walter Wagner, one of the big-time producers on the Coast . . . Only the New Amsterdam remains identical . . . Particularly interesting, however, in the programs of the 1915 "Follies" was the presence of four great comics in the same show, and I can understand the late Flo Ziegfeld's resentment in later years when critics declared he had no sense of comedy values . . . Fields, Williams, Errol and Wynn were four of the greatest scene-stealers in the business, each of them willing and capable of swiping a scene from the others by some bit of hilarity . . . Ed Wynn, one night, crept under W. C. Fields' famous pool table, while Bill was working . . . Detecting him, Fields calmly leaned down and rapped him sharply on the head with the heavy billiard cue . . . From then on, the other comics left W. C. severely alone.

Broadway of 1915, on New Year's Eve, offered Willie and Eugene Howard, John Charles Thomas and Marilyn Miller at the Winter Garden . . . At the Forty-fourth Street Theater were Will Rogers and Irene Franklin in "Hands Up" . . . The Globe, now a movie house, billed Gaby Deslys, Harland Dixon, Flo Hart, Joe Santley, Marion Davies and Marion Harris in "Stop, Look and Listen" . . . Elsie Janis and Irene Bordoni were at the George M. Cohan in "Miss Information" . . . On New Year's Eve, 1920, five years later, Pauline Lord and Edward G. Robinson were emoting at the Plymouth in "Night Lodging" . . . Jane Cowl was at the Broadhurst in "Smilin' Through" . . . Sothern and Marlowe were jamming the Shubert with "Taming of the Shrew," and 15 years later Lunt and Fontanne are playing it on Broadway . . . At the Playhouse Jeanne Eagels, Philip Merivale and Morgan Farley held forth in "A Young Man's Fancy" . . . Winter Garden tenant was the "Passing Show of 1919," with Blanche Ring, Charles Winninger, Jim Barton and Tilly Barton . . . The Lyric offered Edna May Oliver and Oscar Shaw in "Rose of Chind." damaged in the slightest by any jar of the rocket either in starting or in flight.

The motion picture caused exclamations of surprise among scientists at the slow, easy start of this rocket. It was touched off electrically. Immediately a huge sheet of flame belched downward to the ground at the foot of the 60-foot tower in which the rocket is set for firing.

Momentarily the rocket did not move. Then it slowly started to ascend its track straight up the tower. At first it moved more slowly than an elevator. It gathered speed rapidly toward the top, but never met with any visible jarring force.

The Phyllis Wheatley Y. W. C. A. will hold open house at 901 Rhode Island avenue northwest, between 7 and 10 p. m.

The Diplomatic Corps failed to get excited over the death of 1935. A check of many embassies and legations revealed few watch parties or any other parties were scheduled. Several ambassadors and ministers are spending the holidays out of town and of those remaining few were hosts at functions.

While merrymaking was at its height, the Capital's rescue missions and shelter houses went ahead as usual with their tasks of feeding and housing transients, whose plight has been made acute by cold weather.

Night club entertainment ranged from simply dancing, drinking and dining to elaborate tableaux and specialties. At one of the more popular places the room was darkened on the stroke of midnight and mammoth ice carvings depicting Father Time and the infant 1936 were brought in on the shoulders of the chef and his assistants. The sculpture was illuminated, in keeping with the spirit of the occasion.

Among the organizations holding their own celebrations were the Societe des 40 Hommes et 8 Chevaux, Chi Sigma Sorority, Delsigma Fraternity and the Young Democrats.

With Congress convening Friday, repopulation of the Capital by Senators and Representatives continued apace yesterday and more arrivals are expected today. The earliest comers are those members from distant States. Those who live within a day's travel of Washington are, in most cases, spending New Year's home with their families and friends.

Representative Robert A. Green, of Florida, is expected today with his bride, the Hotel Mayflower reported, also Representative and Mrs. Clarence E. Hancock, of New York. Hagners Hosts at Ball; Eggnog Parties Today

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

"Happy New Year, Happy New Year."

Last midnight the wish resounded here and the world around. Later, for a few hours there will be a breathing spell for the revelers, and then the gayety will begin again as New Year's eggnog parties start the afternoon.

Last night there was a gay party at the Sulgrave Club, an ideal place for a small ball. Mr. and Mrs. Alex B. Hagner were the hosts and the guest of honor was Miss Marguerite Hagner, sister of young Mr. Hagner and the debutante daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Randall Hagner. Mr. and Mrs. Alex Hagner, popular members of the younger set, have been making their home near Warrenton for the past two years.

Mrs. Hagner, the former Caroline Roebling, daughter of Mrs. Arthur O'Brien, is a horsewoman of ability, and on the Warrenton estate are many mounts used for hunting. However, in spite of living more than 40 miles from the Capital, the young Hagners come to Washington every few days for parties. Last evening's dance originally was planned for December 28, but Mrs. Joseph Leiter decided on that evening to give a ball for her debutante daughter, Miss Nancy Leiter.

Miss Hagner Receives.

The guests arrived shortly before midnight from various dinners, to remain until the party ended just before dawn. Miss Hagner received with her brother and sister-in-law before a screen of ferns and holiday greens.

Mrs. Hagner wore a robe de style of pale blue metal cloth, heavily threaded with coppery gold. The gown was fashioned with a long, full skirt, and a square neckline finished in the front with stiff lapels of the same material. The debutante wore a period gown of white taffeta threaded with tiny stripes of gold.

Preceding the dance, Mr. and Mrs. Hagner entertained at a dinner at the club for about 130 guests.

Small tables were arranged in the hall and drawing rooms of the club, at which supper was served after the new year had beeen rung in and the old year given a fond farewell.

Party at Embassy.

Another amusing party last night was that given at the home of the Agricultural Secretary of the Spanish Embassy and Senora de Echegaray. Here many members of the younger diplomatic set gathered at 11 o'clock for a buffet supper and dancing, many arriving later from other parties.

This afternoon a party will be given by Mr. and Mrs. Hugh D. Auchincloss at the 1925 F Street Club. The hosts had planned the party at their country home, Merrywood, in nearby Virginia, but Mr. and Mrs. Auchincloss, realizing that the snowy roads would not make for easy transportation into the country, moved the party into town. For several years Mr. Auchincloss has entertained on New Year's Day at his home on Massachusetts avenue, now occupied by Mr. and Mrs. W. Forbes Morgan, and the parties have been outstanding. This year he and his bride, the former Mrs. Nina Gore Vidal, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Thomas Gore, will greet their friends together from 5 until 7 o'clock.

Another newly married couple who will keep "open house" this afternoon is the second Secretary of the Canadian Legation and Mrs. D'Arcy McGreer, who, since their marriage in the autumn have been residing in Kensington, Md. Mrs. McGreer was formerly Mrs. Kitty Lester Hett, who as Kitty Lester made her debut in the Capital some years ago, and since has resided away from Washington, paying infrequent visits to her sister, Mrs. Ruth Buchanan.

The Congressional Club on New Hampshire avenue will follow a custom of many years, and will have the annual New Year open house from 4 until 7 p. m.

Sub-Debs Enjoy New Year Dance

Mrs. W. M. Whittington Receives Guests at Congressional Club.

The annual New Year's party for the sub-debutante group was held last evening at the Congressional Club, 2001 New Hampshire avenue. A buffet supper was served at 7:30 and dancing followed. The Marine Band played for the dancing, which began with several german figures.

Mrs. William M. Whittington, president of the club, received the guests, assisted by Mrs. Robert M. Duncan and Mrs. Thomas A. Wadden.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

GLOVES have blossomed forth this season in a variety of interesting fabrics. Chief among them to receive the plaudits of shoppers are those made of soft camel's hair suede. First it was dresses of this material, and they were heartily welcomed, being light weight, warm and pleasant to the touch. And now gloves. They're the snuggest things imaginable, and cosy as little furnaces. You can buy them to highlight your winter costume in lovely shades of red, blue, rust and beige. They are also available in the ever so practical brown and black. The price, $1.

Equally interesting in the realm of gloves are the doubly protective mittens that come in two "layers." First, the woolly knit mitts in gay colors, and to slip on over these sturdy leather mitts.

These are grand for winter sports, since the inside mittens give their share of warmth and the outside leather ones an added bit plus waterproofing. They are $1.95 a pair.

New Dress Collars.

THOSE of you who find your winter clothes growing frightfully monotonous and yearn already for the light and airy touches of spring will find the neckwear department of a downtown store an interesting place to visit. Here there are some adorable new organdy and lace collars in V and round necks to suit almost any frock. Your winter dress, with the addition of one of these, will have refreshing charm.

Juliet Caps.

THERE'S no denying the flattering powers of a simple Juliet cap. They're devastatingly feminine, smart, and ever so appealing.

But, when Juliet caps first appeared this season they were not exactly modest in price. Now, however, one local store is showing lovely ones of sparkling rhinestones that range in price from $1.50 to $4.95.

If you're looking for something to give a festive touch to your evening ensemble then a Juliet cap is the answer.

Candy for Children.

There's one counter where you'll find sweetmeats planned especially for children. Here is a box of "sweet colors." Ranged in the box after the manner of water colors are chocolates covered with vari-hued paper. To one side there's a couple of candy paint brushes. Only 25 cents.

And then, there are boxes of candy illustrating different stories. Represented are: Ala Baba and the Forty Thieves, Wizard of Oz, Peter Pan, Alice in Wonderland and dozens of others.

There's also a box of luscious "Wonder Pops" that will delight any all-day sucker fan. Quite amusing is the box of candy cigars, and a package of chocolate cigarettes.

Prices of this novelty candy are reasonable beyond your guess.

Novel Vanity Case

ABOUT the cutest little "vanity case" we've seen for many a day is the new arrival in an F street floor. A lovely little moire case about four inches long by two inches wide contains a small round compact, rouge-pact, and lipstick made of a lightweight composition. There's a set in brown that looks for all the world like tortoise shell.

Winter Sport Hose

IDEAL for wearing in bitter cold weather when there's snow on the ground and a vicious wind trying to chill you, are the sport ribbed silk-wool stockings shown in a downtown store.

These are sporty and smart in an rough and ready way. They come in brown, blue, and green, and cost but $1 a pair.

Wife Asks Suggestion for Putting an End to Husband's Pouting.

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Do you know of any recipe for curing a husband of the sulks? I've been married to a pouting husband for seven years and I've just about got to the point where I can't put up with him any longer. The merest trifle is apt to send him into a fit of sulking lasting anywhere from 48 hours to two weeks. Half the time I don't even know what he's sulking about. Many times I've offered apologies on general principles, asking if I had said or done something to offend him, and asking his forgiveness in the event I had.

I almost dread to go any place in company with him, or to have people come in, because he is just as like or not to relapse into a rude and insulting silence before anyone, no matter whom. At such times he will give me a cold, prolonged stare and then deliberately turn to something or some one else. Whatever love I ever had for him has died out almost entirely as a result of his deliberate efforts to punish me for Heaven knows what. He is a well-educated man and should realize how childish he is acting, but apparently he can't see himself as others see him.

Once I tried to cure him by packing up and going away to my old home, in the midst of one of his two weeks' sulking spells, without a word of explanation other than a note I mailed him the same day saying I was going home for a rest. Everything was wonderful for just about three weeks after I got back. Then something sent him off again into one of his stony silences.

What on earth can I do? Other than this, he has no outstanding faults. He is generous with money, doesn't drink, shows no interest in other women, is a successful and respected business man, and isn't bossy or narrow-minded. But I almost hate him when he's sulking and prowling about in one of his injured silences. Again I ask, what can I do, what should I do, Miss Haworth? Please give me the benefit of your thought on the subject. Sincerely, PATIENCE.

Curing Mental Dyspepsia.

DEAR PATIENCE: It sounds to me as if your husband may be suffering from that type of mental dyspepsia which occasionally develops in persons with great physical energy and abundant potential creative ability who haven't discovered a sufficient number of satisfying outlets for their energies and talents.

Let's suppose he's constantly depressed by a subconscious feeling of frustration; that he is a victim of what one school of phychologists term "the inferiority complex." He is privately convinced that he is undeserving of the esteem and affection of those whose opinion he values most—yours, for instance. He lives in fear of losing your regard; is nervously alert for slights and cuts, and, being a morbid introvert, imagines he sees them where they don't exist. The world of fancy to such persons is more actual than the world of reality.

• • • •

In tactfully guiding your husband into more on-going and out-going channels of thought and action you would be supplying him with the best cure for his sulks, so called. Would it not be possible for you to interest him in some hobby or hobbies, in the pursuit of which you might join him? He needs the mental and spiritual healing of self-forgetfulness, which comes of complete absorption in a challenging occupation so suited to his talents that the labor involved seems more like play than work. He needs the lift of self-esteem, which is born of acknowledged mastery in some field of endeavor. In joining him in the pursuit of some hobby you might present your interest as equal to his but your ability as considerably less and convince him of your great admiration and repect for his powers of achievement.

• • • •

A wisely chosen course of reading might help him get a saving slant on himself; or a few heart-to-heart talks with a good psychologist or psychiatrist. It might be well for you to talk your problem over with such a practitioner and secure his advice and co-operation in helping your husband. Such a person could suggest the right reading matter and the proper tactics to employ in securing your husband's interest in a fuller program of activities. I truly believe your husband is essentially an unusually intense and loyal person, whose interest, for lack of wider, more objective and wholesome outlets, has centered on himself—and that he is eating his heart out for real or fancied lack of understanding. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

MAYBE THE VOGUE for the slender figure is responsible . . . anyway the dining room no longer has the center of the stage and in most homes it has gotten very much run down. Then in a hospitable mood we suddenly discover that the room isn't up to our needs.

So we step out and begin a flurry of delayed activity in the dining room. One lady in this same boat has just purchased a Chippendale dining table and Chippendale chairs with white leather seats, a Chippendale server and a Chinese Chippendale cabinet. What would be best for a table centerpiece? What type of pictures? What draperies . . . floral chintz or Chinese patterned blocked linen? The colors of the room are white, maroon and blue. The only thing she has kept from her old dining room is a pair of crystal girondoles which she expects to use on the server. What type of china? Our ideas would be to have for the centerpiece a lovely piece of Sheffield silver—or more crystal to repeat the note of the girondoles. Good reproductions of eighteenth century paintings would be our choice for the pictures—then either floral chintz or the blocked linen would be all right for draperies. Or damask in either a Georgian floral or a Chinese motif would be quite handsome. English china in a floral pattern or in a Chinese design would be our choice.

Send a stamp for Miss Boykin's bulletin, "Things to Know About China Ware," if you are puzzled about the different types and terms you encounter in the china department.

Inez Demonet Finds Avocation Is Spice of Life

By Hope Ridings Miller.

YOUR VOCATION MAY bring you bread and butter, but an avocation provides the spice of life—a continuous challenge to your talent, an insurance against going stale.

That, anyway, is the opinion of Miss Inez Demonet, scientific illustrator for the National Institute of Health, and an artist for her own enjoyment, as well as for that of a number of persons who are fortunate enough to own some of her etchings.

Proof that a woman can hold a full-time job and do creative work as a sideline lies in the fact that Miss Demonet's etching, "Hope," which appeared recently in the annual exhibit of the Washington Society of Etchers, won the Howe P. Cochran prize; that her work has attracted wide recognition in Washington and has brought a good deal of financial return, "though not enough," she laughed, "to furnish a living for me."

Double Life.

Yesterday in her office at the Health Institute Miss Demonet told something of how she leads "a double life as a commercial and creative artist;" how she finds enough time after office hours to accomplish something along the line in which she is most interested, and how she hopes eventually to be successful enough in her avocation to make it her vocation.

"I'll admit it's not easy to put in a full day here making scientific drawings and then go home and work some more," she said. "Both illustrating (particularly when the subject is microscopic) and etching are hard on the eyes, so I must be careful. Yet I'm convinced you can generally find time to do anything if you really want to," she continued. "The trick lies in making yourself start. I find myself making all sorts of excuses before I begin a new etching. But once it's under way, I can hardly stop."

She doesn't observe regular hours for her avocation, because, in her own words, "You can't do that with art. At least I can't. I try to work two or three nights each week and almost every Saturday afternoon and Sunday. Sometimes I begin directly after dinner and work only a couple of hours. Sometimes, I'm still at it past midnight."

Etching Slow Work.

In this connection she pointed out that etching is not fast work. "Not for me, anyway," she said. "I can finish only about half a dozen plates a year. Some of these are in color and must be done entirely by daylight, which means most of my Saturday afternoons and Sundays must go to them.

When she was studying at the Corcoran School of Art she won a medal for a water-color picture. Later, she did some work in oil. But while she has been etching only four years, she admits this is her favorite medium.

Why? "Chiefly because I like to do detail," she said, "and because I love to watch the blue-green bubbles of acid on copper. Of course, the greatest thrill is in pulling the print to see how the whole picture looks."

Sketches she has made around Washington and on trips to Europe and the Orient have provided her with material. Her prize winner, "Hope," was originally a sketch she made of the Arch of Constantine.

Where did she get the title? "The tiny cross barely visible in the light and shadow of the arch seemed, to me, to symbolize 'Hope'—shining through the ruin of a magnificent work of man," she said.

Her favorite type of subject, however, is not of the "still-life variety." She likes most to etch street scenes, and one of her first prints for 1936 will be based on a sketch she made of shops and people in a street in Paris near the Luxembourg Gardens.

A "Double-Time" Artist and a Prize Winner

Miss Inez Demonet, etcher and scientific illustrator, proves a woman can have two successful careers at the same time. Her etching, "Hope" (left) won a prize when it recently appeared in exhibit.

Stylists Predict Gray Is Color To Dominate Spring Fashions

THERE ARE GRAY DAYS ahead of us, predict stylists. Those who are doing their crystal gazing for spring fashions say suits, tailored dresses and evening chiffons are going to appear in gray.

This is news and good news. Gray is a delightful color in one's wardrobe. It combines easily and beautifully with other shades to make striking ensembles. And—this combining of colors is going to be an important style factor.

Take, for instance, the dress in the picture above. It's a happy combination of a gray crepe blouse or semi-jacket with a soft, deep rose crepe skirt. The clear composition buttons down the front carry out the rose theme.

This is a dress for many practical occasions. Since it's a ring-leader in style it's sure to give the wearer an air of chic wherever she goes. It's sufficiently tailored and plain to make a charming office dress, a comfortable, smart dress for shopping, an appropriate dress for informal luncheons or a stunning outfit for small afternoon or morning bridges.

The silvery gray and rose colors have a suggestion of spring about them but they're not too light for winter wear. Later you'll see more and more of this gray combined with grass green, royal blue and deep lavender.

You may buy this dress in the junior shop of a downtown store. It's price is $10.95.

Annual Check On Health Aids War on Disease

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

THE way to check a fire is to douse it with the proper extinguisher when the blaze is small. The problems of our fire fighters would be relatively simple could every blaze be combated at its very beginning. If disease can be detected before it has made substantial headway, and if proper treatment is then applied, the individual will be saved what may be an expensive illness and weeks or months of suffering. Disease is a two-edged sword. It deprives the person attacked of earning power and it costs something to care for him during the period of incapacity. For this reason all of us should be on the alert for those early signs of disease which, if neglected, too often spell disaster.

But you say: What a fine theory. Perhaps it should be done, but only a small number will heed the warning, and, anyway, the average individual knows so little about the initial symptoms of serious disease that he cannot distinguish between the trivial and the important. It should not be necessary to run to the physician with every ache and pain and we can make ourselves actually ill by giving too much attention to our physical well-being. However, we need have no fear that we will become a nation of neurotics or hypochondriacs merely through the possession of some knowledge of the early signs of disease.

Annual Examination.

In order that we may acquire the "inventory" habit, a procedure is again suggested that has been rather widely adopted and that is becoming more general every year—that is, an annual physical check-up at the hands of a competent physician. It is his job then and there to locate incipient disease before it has started on a vicious rampage. If given the opportunity he can detect those minor conditions that are relatively simple to remedy.

The physician's examination should include a careful inspection of the general state of nutrition, the heart, the lungs, the gastrointestinal tract, the rectum (particularly in those in middle life and older), the cells of the blood, the blood pressure, and all possible foci of infection, particularly of the mouth, the nasal passages and the throat.

Early Check.

Many no doubt fail to take advantage of an annual physical inventory largely because of the time involved. Physical data that are of value cannot be gathered hurriedly. Nevertheles, the average examination should not require more than one hour. Naturally, if disease is discovered, further investigation may be needed, but the number of cases demanding more than the minimum period will not be large.

Others may actually fear that serious disease will be found. How much better it is to detect tuberculosis before it has spread, heart failure before the symptoms have become manifest, or diabetes before serious consequences are in the offing.

A number of my friends have set themselves routinely to the procedure and are the better for it. They feel—and justifiedly so—that they are employing a physician to keep them well, rather than to repair a wreck. Many of them will visit the doctor's office every six months, others once a year.

Concealment Harmful.

Neither concealment nor denial will check or cure disease. With the remarkable facilities made available by modern medicine, there are but few diseases that, once recognized, will not yield to proper management. When a disease condition becomes obvious to the patient's friends, it is usually too late.

It is no sign of great intelligence on the part of a successful businessman to boast that he has not visited a physician in 20 years. Perhaps he has had no need to do so. On the other hand, according to the law of averages, some wear and tear has probably occurred necessitating minor adjustments.

'Trucking' Craze Drives Dance Teachers Silly

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Park avenue is "trucking" these days with a wow—leaving Manhattan's more effete dancing instructors deliriously ashamed of how their pupils do carry on.

The weird shuffling rhythm, born and reared in Harlem's mumbo-jumbo spots, has beaten its way from Lenox avenue to Debutante Row.

Arthur Murray, president of the National Institute of Social Dancing, is unhappily torn between approval of a musical cash register and disapproval of what he regards as an incipient menace to the propriety of the dance.

"'Trucking,'" he said, "is driving us silly. Here we try to teach the waltz, tango and foxtrot, and what happens? They call us up and ask us to send an instructress over to their Park avenue parties to show them how to truck. That's what happens."

Murray finds little he can say in favor of "trucking" except that it has brought the financial feet of dance instruction skittering back from the abyss where they tottered ever since the soft music of October, 1929.

SUPPER MENUS for TODAY

New Year's Dinner Remnants Supply Hostess With Snack for Guests.

By Dorothea Duncan.

NEW YEAR'S afternoon is a national day for afternoon callers, and though you have planned to serve a late dinner that day and dispense with supper entirely, you may find two or three guests hanging on in the late afternoon with great expectations for an invitation to supper.

The remnants of the New Year's dinner will supply any hostess with an attractive snack for the members of her family and a few guests. If you feel so inclined to invite several of your late afternoon callers to join the family in hurriedly gotten together bite, don't hesitate a minute because the meal is nothing but leftovers. Many times these cold turkey sandwiches, leftover bits of cranberry jelly and a hastily prepared salad taste better than an especially planned dinner. If your guests are hungry and have come unannounced they will appreciate your invitation and relish the meal set before them.

The following suggested supper menus have been planned for the woman who has served one of those traditional New Year's Day meats—baked ham, chicken or turkey.

NEW YEAR'S NIGHT SUPPERS

Celery hearts Cranberry relish
Turkey sandwiches
Hot cocoa Hot tea
Fruit cake

2.

Pickles Queen olives
Sliced baked ham
Swiss cheese
Assorted breads sliced and buttered
Apple and celery salad
Hot cider

3.

Fruit cup
Creamed chicken on toast points
Cranberry jelly nested in lettuce
Assorted cookies
Spiced tea Milk (for children)

Trained Women Are in Demand For Good Jobs

Initiative and Imagination Cited as Qualifications by Mrs. Shouse.

DISCUSSING woman's chance in modern industry, Mrs. Jouett Shouse, in a recent radio address in New York pointed out that there is a definite demand for "women who can write, who have artistic ability, who have a knack of meeting and talking with people, and who can meet competition."

She also mentioned that the Institute of Women's Professional Relations has discovered through a research program now in effect, that woman's chances for today are not "hit and miss;" that proper training, some initiative and much imagination are absolute factors in getting a job.

Still Frontiers.

"There are still frontiers in work; still much room for the spirit of the pioneer," she said. "Those who have succeeded during these lean years are those who have developed their own jobs to meet consumer demands."

She further explained that trained women are finding suitable employment as consultants—advising on what women want, what they will buy and how they want it presented to them—in industries making food products and household equipment.

"Women are finding jobs with public utility companies as demonstration agents," she said. "Electricity is reaching more communities through the demands of the times, and women are finding good jobs as agents to demonstrate labor-saving devices and practical household aids."

Explains Demand.

Emphasizing that "scientific discoveries are constantly changing the work picture," she urged women job seekers to develop an alertness to see "what the demands are, and how they can be met. "Many women have prospered who have thoughtfully studied consumer demand and have established independent services to meet that demand."

In conclusion, she pointed out that work for women need not be considered from the same viewpoint as work for men. "I feel there are numerous opportunities for women," she said, "in which there is less of the 'man against women' day to day competition, and an increasing number of jobs for women in her natural sphere of supplementing and increasing man's usefulness, at the same time enhancing her own chances."

Capital Faces Relief Burden Needing Cash

Congress to Be Asked for Appropriation; Chest Inadequate.

Washington faces the new year with the greatest relief emergency in its history on its hands today.

With business conditions here and throughout the Nation reported better than they have been at any time since 1929 the city appeared unprepared to feed and clothe the more than 23,000 families whom the recovery has overlooked.

The gloom that pervades all official agencies charged with the responsibility for caring for the city's needy was reflected yesterday by Clarence Phelps Dodge, president of the Community Chest. Officials of the Chest met yesterday to review the situation.

Dodge made it clear that abnormal relief needs existing here cannot be met by the Chest.

"Discontinuance of Federal relief funds for the District brought the question of needed relief sharply to the fore in Washington," Dodge said. "That the need was, and is, genuine there can be no doubt. Curtailment of District funds during the month of December accentuated this need. The Commissioners recognized the gravity of the problem and are planning to ask Congress for additional funds while at the same time using available money to restore the cut of 25 per cent which was effective in December.

Chest Bureau Crowded.

"In the meantime the application bureau of the Chest has been crowded with persons presenting cases of dire need. The Community Chest agencies had no funds to meet this abnormal situation. Some of the more outstanding of these cases have reached the public through the newspapers. Others have become known through appeals to private individuals. Some people, forgetting the specific purposes for which the recent Chest campaign was conducted, criticize the Chest agencies for failure to care for these people.

"When the campaign goal of $1,877,900 was set last fall it was based on the minimum needs of the 65 agencies comprising the Community Chest."

The Federal policy of closing WPA rolls to those whose self-supporting facilities expired after November 1 is giving the District its biggest relief problem. This class of needy has been reaching District relief rolls at the rate of 500 a month. Twenty-one new families came on the dole yesterday.

Many of these are employable. They represent, for the most part, persons whose resources were sufficient to carry them through the worst of the depression and who have only recently found themselves in such straits that they must seek outside aid.

Their only source for assistance is the District government. Because of this new relief factor, principally, the District has been piling up a relief deficit of approximately $100,000 a month. Failure of the Federal Government to transfer to WPA rolls about 1,500 eligible employables is a contributing deficit factor.

13,319 Certified For Work.

District officials yesterday counted the number of its relief cases at 23,318. Of these 13,319 heads of families have been certified for works progress jobs.

On the top of these figures comes the threat of an additional relief burden for the District. NRA was abandoned yesterday, leaving about 1,200 persons to seek transfer to other Government agencies or to find employment in private industry. Moreover, the staffs of WPA and AAA are being curtailed at a rate that soon will leave thousands of persons without jobs and hundreds of miles from home.

Commissioner George E. Allen, who heads up the District relief machinery, expects to ask Congress for $600,000 in relief money. To further lighten the relief burden, officials will ask Federal Relief Administrator Harry Hopkins to move the deadline up from November 1 to, perhaps, March 15.

Possibility of success in these endeavors gives authorities some hope. Furthermore, approval by Congress of social security appropriations for the District is expected to take care of a large portion of unemployables who have reached the age of eligibility for old-age pensons.

Blaze in Northwest Causes $2,000 Damage

Damage estimated at $2,000 was caused last night by a fire in a two-story brick building at 1631 L street northwest. Most of the damage was in the rear of the structure. The first floor was occupied by Henry Moy's laundry and the second floor by the Rufus E. Milor Co., contractors. The origin was undetermined.

Boy, Tired of Travels, All Set for Leap Year

'Any Girl—20 to 40—' Says CCC Youth Awaiting Job.

At least, that's the sentiment of Paul Martin, young, husky and willing—willing to marry any girl in Washington between the ages of 20 and 40.

Martin is 21 (he'll be 22 next July). For the past six months, he has been working at the CCC camp just beyond Arlington Memorial Bridge. He hails from New York City and admits he has a "good eductaion." But let's let Martin tell his story as he told it to The Post:

"I'd like to get married. But I'm a stranger in Washington and have no way of meeting people. I'm tired of roaming around. I like Washington and I'd like to find a job here and settle down.

"I'd be willing to marry any woman in Washington between the ages of 20 and 40 who would be willing to support me until I find a steady job in town.

"I'm serious. This is no hoax. I'm just a lonely guy who wants to meet an equally decent and lonely woman. I am 6 feet tall, weigh 155 pounds, am fairly good looking, neat appearance and educated."

So there you have it.

Martin said he has spent most of his youth traveling about the country. He had a steady girl back in New York—"but she married a baker making $30 a week."

He has worked in department stores and is a good farmer (he admits this, too).

"The girl I marry," he said, "doesn't have to be beautiful. She can be a blonde, brunette or redhead. But I would first like to meet her and talk things over—sort of see that we can get along."

All he wants, Martin added, is to have someone support him while he looks for work—something in a clerical line. He said he liked the CCC camp, but he would rather have a home and wife.

"I guess maybe I'll be kidded by the other fellows—but I don't even care about that," he smiled.

Red Cross Gains 200,000 in 1935

Grayson Tells of Progress in His First Year.

An increase of 200,000 in the membership of the American Red Cross for 1935 was announced yesterday. The year was the first for the organization under the chairmanship of Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

The total membership during 1934 was 3,837,941, the increase giving the Red Cross well over 4,000,000 members.

Highway stations for emergency use now number 235 in 25 States with 1,436 stations in the process of being set up.

More than 2,350 committees have been organized in the home and farm accident prevention program.

"The increased membership is most encouraging," Admiral Grayson said. "It shows added interest in and appreciation of Red Cross services."

Estate Is Willed Attorney Here

The Associated Press reported that his grand-aunt, the late Sarah E. Bruce, of New York, had left a net estate of $5,030,597, according to a transfer appraisal filed in New York.

Deducting certain specific bequests and inevitable taxes, Howe will receive half of the estate. He is a member of the law firm of Howe & Bradley.

Loses $9 in Holdup.

Three men grabbed Percy A. Brown, 1236 Eleventh street northwest, as he was walking in the 1000 block of O street northwest last night. They took $9 from his pockets, he told police.

Police Return Man Accused In Fraud Case

Held for $1,000 Robbery in Confidence Scheme; Officer Was Victim.

Arthur Nino, 22, who police allege has used the aliases of "Jack Arlen" and "Lieut. Thompson," was returned to Washington from Philadelphia yesterday in custody of Detective Sergeant James M. Tolson on charges of fleecing Lieut. Comdr. G. C. Hawkins of $1,000 in an alleged confidence game.

Last August, police said, Lieut. Comdr. Hawkins, a retired naval officer, made the acquaintance of a man who called himself "Lieut. Thompson" in a downtown bar. The pair became quite friendly and Commander Hawkins took Thompson to his home at 2401 Calvert street northwest.

A day afterward, Commander Hawkins told police, a man appeared at his home representing himself as a detective and an emissary from Lieut. Thompson. The detective told Hawkins and his wife, Eve, that Thompson was in dire trouble, being injured and in jail, and that bail of $1,000 was required for his release.

Commander Hawkins and his wife took the detective in their car. They drove downtown to police headquarters, which the detective pointed out as Thompson's place of incarceration. Then they drove to their bank, where Mrs. Hawkins cashed a check for $1,000, the money, in a single bill, being placed in the detective's hat. The detective left them.

When no more was heard from Thompson or the detective, the Hawkins notified police. Police charge that Nino was the man who posed as Lieut. Thompson. They know the identity of the spurious detective and are still searching for him, they said. The charge placed against Nino was grand larceny.

Mass Meeting of Drys Awaits Guyer Hearings

Postponement of a dry meeting, scheduled for January 16, until Congressional hearings begin on the Guyer bill, was announced yesterday by Dr. E. M. Ellison, leader of the United Dry Forces.

Dr. Ellison said he felt it better to wait until the hearings start before holding a mass meeting.

"We have been assured that hearings will be held on this bill to return prohibition to the District," he said.

Veteran Policeman, 63, To Get New Assignment

Policeman James M. Peterson, colored, of the Seventh Precinct, will be relieved of the strenuous Georgetown water-front beat he has patrolled for 33 years, Saturday on his sixty-third birthday.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, ordered yesterday that new and easier duties be found for Peterson in the remaining years before his retirement.

Board to Get Building Data From Ballou

Basic Policy Expected to Follow Lines of 1925 Law.

The first preliminary factual report on the proposed long-range school building program will be submitted at tomorrow's Board of Education meeting, first of the new year.

Basic policy, Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said yesterday, would probably be the same as that incorporated in the last five-year building program act, passed in 1925.

That policy called for:

1. Elimination of all portables, although last month the school board authorized temporary establishment of two portables in Randle Highlands.

2. Elimination of the use of rented buildings.

3. Elimination of part-time school days in the elementary schools.

4. Maximum enrollment of 40 pupils in each elementary school class.

Will Seek Purchase Authority.

Enactment of a statement of policy, including legislative authorization of certain buildings and land purchases, will be sought by the Board of Education at the coming session of Congress.

The move was decided upon some three months ago, when school officials concluded that a long-range co-ordinated program was the only way of catching up on present needs. Arguing with appropriations committees on specific items, they said, resulted in haphazard and insufficient growth.

Dr. Ballou and his associates have been going over every phase of the school system to file a report on population and enrollment trends as well as present moment needs.

Dr. Ballou said he would submit only a factual statement, with the recommendations being decided upon by the board, to be put into legislative form later by the board's legislative committee. He said the program might not have a time-limit, although previously authorities had suggested outlining of a year-by-year program for a five-year period.

Would Smooth Future Path

While officials would not be able to secure a wholesale appropriation authorization for the full program, the feeling is that the obtaining of a wholesale legislative authorization would smooth the path for future appropriations.

Other items to come up at the board meeting, it was announced yesterday, include:

1. Action on the recent textbook investigation report which absolved four questioned books of charges of Communist leanings.

2. Determination of policy regarding the two health schools. These schools accommodate children suffering from incipient tuberculosis, and the suggestion has been made that they be sent instead to the children's sanitarium at Glenn Dale, Md. The Health Department recently recommended continuance of the schools, urging close check on cases of tubercular children.

3. Report by the superintendent on the practice regarding payment for lost books. Teachers have complained of being unjustly billed for books lost by children.

Chess and Checker Star to Be at 'Y'

William B. Mundelle, chess and checker wizard, will engage challengers by the wholesale in an exhibition in the lobby of the Young Men's Christian Association, 1736 G street northwest, between 5 p. m. and 8 p. m. today.

Mundelle is 80 years old, and for many years was the District checker champion, besides being a recognized star at chess. This evening he will play simultaneously as many as 20 players at both games. Anybody who beats him will be awarded a book prize. Opponents are requested to bring their own boards and pieces.

The checker and chess tournament will be a feature of a New Year's Day "open house" celebration.

Fight on 'Red' School Books Is Renewed

Federation Will Carry On Private Inquiry Sullivan Says.

The fight over allegedly communistic textbooks in the public schools will be carried into the new year.

Late yesterday members of the Federation of Citizens Associations filed a 13-page brief with the Board of Education, denouncing the report by a special board investigating committee that had absolved four textbooks of the communism charge. The board is to act on the report tomorrow.

The citizens' brief called the report "ridiculous," and described the membership of the investigating committee as "unfortunate." A continuing of the citizens' private investigation, led by George E. Sullivan, was pledged. Other members of the citizens' committee are Harry N. Stull, Mrs. George Corbin and Mrs. Horace J. Phelps. All signed the brief.

No More Hearings.

As a result of a resolution adopted at the board's last meeting, the board will not hold any more hearings on the report. School officials said yesterday that only one other communication on the subject had been received since the report was filed December 18. This, a letter by Joseph W. Cheyney, also dissented from the report.

Meanwhile, members of the superintendent's staff were ending the year with overtime work in an effort to co-ordinate reports from the 176 District schools on the 205 periodicals used in classes, and on the way those periodicals are used.

The citizens' brief cited the board's separate action in ejecting Erik Achorn's "European Civilization and Politics" from the textbook lists on the ground that it might be construed as "too favorable to communism," and held that the fact that this book was not mentioned in the report was conducive to suspicion.

"The pressing circumstances surrounding the elimination of this textbook at the last meeting of the board," the brief asserted, "make many persons express the honest doubt whether it would have been eliminated even then but for such pressing circumstances."

Patriotism Cited.

The citizens' committee wrote that "the rank and file generally of the teachers in the public school system are conceded by everyone to be patriotic in the highest sense, and to be opposed to the giving to pupils of textbooks or study magazines or anything else containing subversive matter, whether 'red' or 'pink' or otherwise anti-patriotic."

"We are utterly unwilling to depend upon an antidote being administered in classrooms to overcome subversive matter in textbooks, study magazines, etc. And it is doubly unreasonable for the Maurer committee to suggest it, in view of the well known fact that our teachers are being more and more controlled by supervising officers who are brought from afar and as to whom, the citizens here can know nothing."

Ickes Sorry for Victims Of High D. C. Rentals

Secretary Ickes yesterday extended his sympathy to members of Congress who have complained of their inability to find suitable living quarters in Washington at rents anywhere near what they pay in their home districts.

"There's a good deal to be said for the proposition of building homes for Congressmen and employes of the Government," he said. "Such projects certainly would be self-liquidating."

While there has been much talk about Government-financed apartment houses for Congressmen, Ickes, who heads the PWA housing division, said he knew of no definite move now under way.

P.-T. A. to Inaugurate Campaign for Safety

The Buchanan Parent-Teacher Association will inaugurate a campaign to teach children of the Buchanan School, Thirteenth and D streets southeast, safety measures when the school reopens tomorrow.

A safety poster contest is planned and prizes will be awarded to the children making the best drawings. Miss Cecelia Dulin, principal, will direct the work and address the children on safety.

Greetings! 1936!!

Safety Is Keynote of District Officials as 1935 Becomes History, etc., etc.

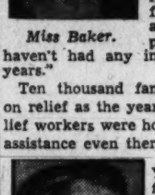
District officials went home early yesterday afternoon, happy. And they were looking forward to a happy New Year for the District as well.

Spreading good wishes as they left their offices, most were hoping chiefly that the District in 1936 would be a better and a safer place to live in. Led by Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, gaunt and smiling veteran of the District service, and president of the Board of Commissioners, they were hoping for safer streets.

Donovan.

Traffic killed 116 persons in 1935 in Washington, but still that was far below 1934's all-time record of 135, and well below 1932's previous record of 124, they pointed out.

Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown: "The police department hopes to see more safety on the streets. We had a reduction in fatalities last year as against 1934, but we want to see all traffic fatalities eliminated, and the Golden Rule applied to driving. For the department, I'd like to see an increase in the force to enable adequate police protection. We haven't had any increase for five years."



Miss Baker.

Ten thousand families remained on relief as the year ended, but relief workers were hoping for further assistance even there.

Elgen.

"Happy New Year," the officials wished the District, as they closed the old year, and here's what some added:

Hopes for Safety.

Commissioner Hazen: "I hope we won't have as many automobile accidents as we had last year. We managed to reduce the toll some in 1935, but people must still realize the responsibilities they take when they drive, and that looks almost like the biggest problem there is. I would like to see us get that bill through to get $3,500,000 for a new small-courts building. You know the condition in which the courts are housed now. In every way, I wish the District a happy new year."

Dr. Ruhland.

Health Officer George C. Ruhland: "I hope to see good health, and for that we need adequate machinery, and that means more service — more housing for the official machinery, more nurses, above all.

All in all, it was a happy old year for the District. As Commissioner Hazen pointed out, with 16 District bills passing Congress, the District got more consideration from its "town council" than it had in many a year.

Hazen.

And through the District improvements showed a thriving old year—new homes, new streets, new sewers. The Health Department had used works funds to boost its health work, particularly in tuberculosis. Schools received a new Woodrow Wilson High School and a new Anacostia High School.

Needs Apparatus.

Fire Chief Charles E. Schrom: "It would be a happy new year to me to see our fire department in working condition. We do need apparatus."

Schools Superintendent Frank W. Ballou: "More than anything else in the school system, there ought to be an increase in personnel — officers, teachers, janitors. Enrollment has been going up. Personnel has not."

Maj. Brown.

Playground Director Sibyl Baker: "If I could have anything I wanted, I'd like to see a safe place for every child to play in—and that means playgrounds, of course."

Dr. Ballou.

Public Utilities Commissioner Riley E. Elgen: "A happy new year to me now would see all the street cars and buses in the District keep on time, and I think that would relieve the Public Utilities Commission, too, of most of its anxiety."

Budget Officer Daniel J. Donovan: "Well, we've got a good District budget drawn up. I'd like to see it approved, the way the Commissioners prepared it. Here's hoping."

Chief Schromm.

Starting the new year off, Corporation Counsel E. Barrett Prettyman had drafted for the Commissioners more than a dozen new bills scheduled to receive Congressional consideration. They would tighten up existing legislation on drug control, gambling, corporation regulation, etc. But no major change in District administration loomed for the new year as busy 1935 faded into history.

5,000 Tagless Motorists Face Arrest After Deadline Today

The year 1936 starts off with 5,000 District motorists lacking new license tags. If they try to drive with their old tags after 8 a. m. today, they will be subject to arrest.

William A. Van Duzer, director of traffic, said there would be no extension of time for those who failed to get their plates.

The doors of Traffic Department in the Ford Building swung shut yesterday at 1 p. m.

At that hour, 1,000 applicants were standing in line. Many of them apparently did not know about the half-holiday. Told that they would have to wait until tomorrow, they groaned and walked away.

When the Traffic Department opened at 8 a. m., a long line of applicants was outside. By noon the line was four blocks long. Nearly 7,000 tags were issued.

As the New Year came in, the Traffic Bureau went out of existence, to be supplanted by the Traffic Division. This will have 28 less men than the old organization and will be commanded by Capt. Milton Smith.

Inspector Benjamin Lamb, who has been in charge of the bureau, will become inspector of traffic for the District, and will command all motorcycle policemen operating from the precincts.

Complaints about distribution of the tags came into The Post last night, one man asserting he had applied for his tags by mail a fortnight ago and had failed to get them before the deadline. Those complaining said several thousand tags remained piled up in the offices of a delivery service utilized by the traffic director's office.

Neither Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer nor officials of the delivery service could be reached for comment last night.

Traffic Toll Goes to 116 As '35 Ends

Motorman, Going Home, Killed by Truck on Key Bridge.

With one name added yesterday, Washington's traffic death toll was 116 for 1935 as the old year died.

The heavy snow which fell Sunday was blamed in yesterday's traffic fatality—the death of Clarence E. Courtney, 52, who slipped beneath the wheels of an Army truck.

The year's total of deaths was 19 less than the record of 135 killed in 1934. The 116 figure is not yet complete, police pointed out, because in past years persons have died from injuries received the year before.

Dies on Key Bridge.

Courtney, a street car conductor, who lives at Rosslyn, Va., was killed on Key Bridge. He was on his way home when he stepped from a curb over a pile of snow and slipped under the truck.

Bernard E. Martin, 47, a member of the Quartermaster Corps at Walter Reed Hospital, was driving the truck. He was booked under a technical charge pending a coroner's investigation and released in custody of the hospital authorities.

A. A. A. Issues Appeal.

In a New Year appeal for greater safety on streets and highways, the American Automobile Association yesterday declared that experience during the last 12 months definitely pointed to the need for organization on a national scale to cope with conditions.

"We have now reached the point," said Thomas P. Henry, president of A. A. A., "where we may as well concede that sporadic and unrelated campaigns here and there produce no lasting effects as far as the solution of our problem is concerned.

"This problem is so complex, has so many aspects and factors in it, that serious consideration should be given to the feasibility of a plan of organization that would co-ordinate and direct efforts along constructive lines. Only by doing so can we avoid the application of drastic remedies which may often be the growth of hysteria rather than of sound thinking and ascertained facts."

Congressman's Car Hits Cow; Trip Ends

Representative Frank W. Boykin (Democrat), of Alabama, started out in his car for Washington yesterday morning from his home in Mobile with his secretary, Alphonse Lucas. He didn't get far.

Just outside the city he ran into a cow wandering about the road, according to information received here last night. Neither he nor his companion was badly injured. Treated on the scene by a local physician, they returned home to rest for a day before proceeding here by train.

Information about the condition of the cow was not available, but it was learned that Boykin's car was badly damaged. He will entrain sometime today and expects to reach the District in time for the opening of Congress.

Gravel Firm Worker Dies of Heart Attack

Glenn Allen, an employe of the Smoot Sand & Gravel Co., died of a heart attack last night in his room at 2403 Pennsylvania avenue northwest.

Allen was about 45 years old. He had been under the care of a physician for about a year.

Hackers, Clerks and Bankers Rub Elbows With Idle on Jury

Personnel of District Supreme Court juries run the gamut from presidents of the largest institutions in the banking world to unemployed cab drivers, it was shown yesterday when a list of the occupations of the jurors who served during the December term of court was made public.

Corcoran Thom, president of the American Security & Trust Co., was listed among those chosen to serve as jurors in either the civil or criminal courts. And after serving, Mr. Thom, who was drawn from his business duties at the busiest time of the year, expressed himself as being admirably satisfied with the mental and moral caliber of the average juror in the District.

Numerous other bank officials were among those picked by Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue, who frequently broke into explanations of why the prospective juror did not wish to serve with the terse expression, "You are just the type of juror we want," and dismissed the excuse.

Of the 78 jurors selected for civil court duty, the occupations ran from bank heads to construction superintendents and brokers, and from unemployed stenographers to bacteriologist and rental managers. Probably in no other walk of life will such a wide diversity of "talent" be compelled to accept a civil duty as will be found in the District's juries.

Photoengravers, paper hangers, coffee merchants, insurance agents, elevator officials, menial employes and store employes rubbed elbows with one another in deciding the merits of damage suits and in awarding verdicts. Automobile salesmen, haberdashers, chemists, a health institute executive, all manner of salesmen, engineers and clerks were pulled from their daily tasks to assume the civil duty of becoming a juror.

And then, there is listed as an occupation for a small number of jurors "unemployed." In bygone years, the justice charged with the duty of selecting the juries frequently attempted, out of a kindly feeling for the luckless, to pick those actually in need of the money they would receive for jury services. That situation no longer exists since it is hard for the jury commission to pick several hundred names from among unemployed residents of the District.

New Year Woe

His Trousers Went and $175 With Them.

When James H. Murphy awoke in his home at 1523 Kenilworth street northeast early yesterday there were two colored men in his room.

What disturbed Murphy more than that was the men were walking away with his trousers.

What disturbed him still more was the trousers contained, he told police, between $175 and $200.

The men ran, escaping over a rear fence.

Good Morning!

A Happy New Year! None wishes it to you more fervently than we. None has better reason. In our entire sixty-six years in Washington, we have never had a year as good as the past one nor enjoyed the encouragement to expect one as good as we feel everybody will have in 1936.

Lily Pons Adds Gorgeous New Voice to List of Those Distinguishing Sound Films

First Picture Makes Position Stable as Star

By Nelson B. Bell.

"I DREAM TOO MUCH." RKO-Radio picturization of a story by Elsie Finn and David G. Wittels, adapted to the screen by Edmund North and James Gow, starring Lily Pons, with Henry Fonda, Eric Blore, Osgood Perkins, Lucien Littlefield, Mischa Auer, Paul Porcasi, Lucille Ball and Scott Beckett. Directed by John Cromwell. Previewed Monday night.

With all due respect to Grace Moore, Jeanette MacDonald, Irene Dunne and the other songstresses who have brought luster to the audible cinema in a succession of cleverly conceived song-dramas, it still must be said that the finest voice of them all is revealed in "I Dream Too Much," the musicalized romance which began its Washington engagement in the RKO-Keith Theater last night at 7.

Further than recording the most engaging vocal organ the sound tracks have known, Mlle. Pons goes further and establishes herself as a singing comedienne of the very first water. She plays with a carefree abandon, an utter naturalness and a completely disarming insouciance that seldom are encompassed by the proficiency of a single individual.

Mlle. Pons, one of the operatic and concert stages' most effulgent coloraturas, is definitely "in," as the quaint vernacular of the "profession" designates those who are predestined to a constant and unassailable stardom.

She is vivacious, versatile and charming.

And how she can sing!

The story in which this richly gifted young woman makes her debut on the screen may not be quite commensurate with the sterling talents of the brilliant young woman who gives it warmth, humanity and vibrance.

It is a rather humdrum and commonplace recital which one might wish distinguished by a little more of the touch of original thought and less stereotyped development.

Story Is Familiar.

You already know the story. It is that of the young woman who knows she can sing and the young man, to whom she becomes unaccountably married, who thinks he is a composer, but has to resort to taxi driving, and the like, before he is sure of it. The singer wishes to be a home body and a mother; the pseudo composer an impresario. How it all comes out is about as you would expect.

However, what you might not expect is the complete facility with which Lily Pons assumes the role of prime importance in the unraveling of the romantic fable.

Here is a star who deserves the encomiums that might accrue to one who has spent a lifetime in cultivating the subtle artistries of the screen. In her first feature-length picture Lily Pons acquits herself as one to the lenses born. I know of no artiste who so suddenly and so completely has managed the entire business of placing herself among the elect of the celluloids.

Her song contributions to the film range from lively ballads fashioned by that admirable contemporary composer, Jerome Kern, to such exacting operatic arias as the "bell song," from Lakme, and other standard works of like caliber.

Support and Subsidiaries.

The supporting cast, of course, has something to do with the success of "I Dream Too Much." There are, for example, such accomplished players as Henry Fonda, Eric Blore, Osgood Perkins, Lucien Littlefield and others of like attainment on both stage and screen, who must be accorded a share with Mlle. Pons in the success of her first picture.

It seems to me that Mr. Perkins, fine actor that he is, is hardly done justice by in this subject, but Mr. Blore, as the manager of a vaudevillian trained seal; Mr. Fonda, as the young lover and the others in the cast are favorably assigned.

The subsidiary offerings include a new issue of the "Dumbbell Letters," a comedy known by the Barney Googleish name of "Patch Mah Britches," and a new issue of the Pathe News. The bill that is wholeheartedly recommended for the entire family—especially those who enjoy the most distinguished vocalism to be heard on either the rostrum's sturdy boards or the cinema's ghostly silver sheet.

"Mechanical difficulties, at the last moment, were found to prevent the telephonic stunt which we had planned."

That is the usual alibi when something out of the ordinary has to be abandoned at the last minute. But "mechanical difficulties" had nothing to do with the abandonment last night of the proposed interview with Jean Harlow, in her home in Beverly Hills, by the drama desks of the local press to have been loud-speakered to the audience at the midnight show from the stage of Loew's Fox Theater.

We of the so-called Fourth Estate were all ready and waiting when word came from the West Coast that the business was all off by reason of Miss Harlow's having to go on location at 5 p. m. by the clock to make important scenes for "Wife Versus Secretary," in which she is co-starred with William Powell and Myrna Loy.

The Washington hook-up was deemed important by our old friend, Louis B. Mayer, but not important enough to set aside the making of scenes that would run into what we call "heavy dough" in the patois of the back rooms, if they were not run off on schedule. Mr. Mayer won. But it would have been a lot of fun if it had come off the way it was planned by Carter Barron, division manager of Loew's, Inc., and his associates.

I still have some questions to ask that Harlow gal, swell scout that she is.

The National Comes to Life.

It may be of interest to you to know what is coming forth at the National Theater after two weeks of darkness. So here it is.

On Sunday, January 5, as you are well aware, the "Continental Varieties" will hold forth, both matinee and night, with Lucienne Boyer as the bright, particular singing star.

Beginning Monday night, Brook Pemberton will present his touring company in "Personal Appearance," one of the major comedy attractions of the season on Broadway.

Another "Horse," Maybe.

On January 13, Alex Yokel, producer of that fabulous success, "Three Men on a Horse," which had its metropolitan premiere in this city, will bring in "Julie, the Great," his next essay at box-office tops since "Three Men."

For its first American Theater Society subscription play of the season, the Theater Guild of New York, on January 20, will present Philip Merivale and Gladys Cooper in "Call It a Day." Following that, on January 27, will come that incomparable artiste, Cornelia Otis Skinner, in a cycle of her matchless character sketches.

For the week of February 3 we will have William Gillette, revered octogenarian, in a revival of the John Golden production of "Three Wise Fools," one of the most engaging comedy dramas of recent years.

So the theater of the living theater is not dead—as you might have suspected it was.

A Correspondent Objects.

My valued correspondent, Mr. Frank Ford Burnett, 1449 Fairmont street northwest, has the following to say, which I deem worth quoting, verbatim. Mr. Burnett:

Dear Mr. Bell: Another dissenting ballot on the question of what are "best movies" is hereby cast—cast rather hesitantly and without confidence it will do any good.

I take as my major premise the belief that a photoplay ought to be an art work, and the corollary that box-office appeal is no sort of faint indication of merit.

You say more than 400 photoplays were issued during the "voting year" and intimate that your task of choosing therefrom the "10 best" is difficult, not to say a counterpart of the needle-and-haystack problem.

I do not think so.

In fact, I had as soon attempt to choose the "best" legitimate stage play of the year from among the productions of high school dramatic clubs. Your one consolation is that you didn't have to view the entire 400.

The plain fact is that in no single year of issue have there ever been produced ten photoplays worthy of being called first-class art works. This could not be done by a collaboration of Shakespeare, Grace Moore, Reinhardt, Belasco, Lew Wallace and Hecht and MacArthur.

I do not want to quarrel about your list; we each have our opinions. But from the artistic theory I have advanced, "Top Hat," "Steamboat 'Round the Bend" and "G-Men," would hardly rate as worthy of merit, or even consideration.

Saw 50 Films.

I saw 50 "movies" this year, and 20, at least, were "movies" and nothing more — mere animated shadows. Twenty-five had a certain temporary entertainment value. And five I list as being first-class photoplays. In the order named, they are:

1. "A Midsummer Night's Dream."
2. "Don Quixote."
3. "The Scoundrel."
4. "Mutiny on the Bounty."
5. "The Passing of the Third Floor Back."

Of these it will be noted that four are transcriptions—or free adaptations—of plays and books, two of them being literary masterpieces. This illustrates the great weakness of photoplays: the dialogue, the continuity, the artistic completeness. These qualities were found in "The Scoundrel," not because Hecht and MacArthur are great writers, but because they are brilliant writers, and because they made the picture from one end to the other. Aside from that, the dialogue of this picture alone makes it a fine work.

Admires Beauty.

I humbly submit that two more beautiful or finer works have never been done in Hollywood than the "Dream" and "Don Quixote." Scenes from them will remain before my mental eye as long as I live. Perhaps it may be said that no year is a loss if two such works are found therein. But how long will Shakespeare and Cervantes hold out?

May I wish you a Happy New Year—as I know you will wish for all your regular readers? Very sincerely yours,

FRANK FORD BURNET.

Some Not Eligible.

It is a trifle difficult to go along with Mr. Burnett in his single notion of artistry as the deciding factor in the estimation of a picture's greatness. There are more elements entering into than that.

I tried to make this clear in that column that nominated my "ten best."

With regard to "A Midsummer Night's Dream," "The Scoundrel," "Mutiny on the Bounty" and "The Passing of the Third Floor Back," I also attempted to make myself clear.

Several of these, by reason of their release dates, were not eligible for this year's voting.

Signs-of-the-Times Note.

So on my way to the Fox Film Exchange projection room yesterday afternoon to preview "The King of Burlesque"—a very swell film, by the way, in which Warner Baxter gets back to the peak he scaled in "Forty-second Street"—I ran across a loaded truck bearing the name of the Martz Coal Co.

Obviously, one of the busy Martz of trade you have heard so much about!

Falls From Window.

Mrs. Vera Abrams, of 1306 North Capitol street, fell from a window of her second-story bedroom last night. She was taken to the Casualty Hospital, and later transfered to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation and further treatment.

And a Happy New Year to You, Too!

And just to forestall any suspicion of recognition, we may say that these five beautiful young well-wishers for the new year are practically the same young women who wished you a Merry Christmas a few days ago. They are, left to right, Kay Gordon, Dorothy Thompson, Dene Myles, Bonita Barker and Esther Pressman, all of whom appear in Paramount's forthcoming production of "Collegiate," co-starring Joe Penner and Jack Oakie, along with Frances Langford and a host of others. Anyway, "A Happy New Year"—take it or leave it.

Culbertson On Bridge

Every bridge player of experience will quail at the horror of today's tale. Even the most ghoulish should find sympathy for a declarer who, on a reasonably sound three no trump bid, failed to take a single trick. Particularly so, when the opening lead alone was responsible for a swing of eight tricks.

Double (final bid)

It is hard to criticize South's three no trump bid. Granted that it was aggressive, but the freak holding, and the apparent assurance of at least eight tricks, make this bid extremely tempting. Certainly, South could not anticipate a calamity and, even when doubled by West, he should not be severely censured for sticking to his guns.

The villain of the plot was west, who failed to open his partner's bid-suit. Instead, feeling that South was prepared for a spade opening, he "crossed him" by leading the jack of hearts. East played the ace, and led the spade queen through. West's ace smothered the king and a spade was returned. After running his six spades, East shifted to the club queen, and the carnage continued. West merrily ran his five clubs and, on the last card, poor South, who was completely groggy, guessed the wrong card to hold—he had to let go either the heart king or the diamond ace.

And, to cap the climax, while the 2,600-point penalty was being entered, West observed suavely: "Too bad we don't get credit for a grand slam!"

Illinois Asked To Take Care Of Own Needy

State Treasurer Declares Stories of Predicament Are Exaggerated.

By the Associated Press.

Springfield, Ill., Dec. 31.—State Treasurer John Stelle today asked Gov. Horner to call a special session of the Legislature to abolish the Illinois Emergency Relief Commission and provide a State public works program to care for the commission's clients. Simultaneously, he said "statements given out with reference to the position of Illinois regarding relief are, in my opinion, greatly exaggerated."

He referred to assertions made yesterday by the commission that failure of the WPA program to care for all Illinois employable relief clients would force a shutdown of relief activities by January 15.

Stelle, a member of the commission, said the State works program could be financed with the $2,000,000 raised monthly for relief by the sales tax and with an additional $2,000,000 a month to be taken from the State treasury, which Stelle said has an $18,000,000 surplus.

Meanwhile, in Chicago, the relief commission executives planned to shut up shop entirely after January 15 unless additional funds appear. Gov. Horner recently appealed to Federal authorities for financial aid.

Ickes to Leave Sunday On Trip to Puerto Rico

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes announced yesterday he will leave Sunday for a 10-day inspection tour of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

He plans to take a plane from Miami Tuesday and spend two days each in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. He will return to Washington January 14.

Giving You Just a Rough Idea!

But, we trust, not too rough. These three young sirens, then, would be a trio of the allurements you may expect in "The King of Burlesque," the Twentieth Century-Fox film play coming to the screen at Loew's Fox Theater on Friday, with Warner Baxter in a better role than he had in "Forty-second Street," and Alice Faye and Jack Oakie in choice spots. This Oakie fellow is quite a lad, believe it or not—comic no end. And there are a host of others in the cast to make this one of the finest musicals of the season.

Holidays Cut Steel Output 1% for Week

Finished Products Show Some Advances in Same Period.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 31.—The steel industry continues dominated by holiday influences and ingot production has fallen to estimated average of 47½ per cent, compared with 48½ per cent in the previous week, Iron Age said today in its weekly review. Against the further decline of raw steel production the output of finished materials has shown some recovery from the low rates of a week ago, it was stated.

"In finished products long-delayed price advances may materialize early in January, according to latest reports. Sheets, strip steel and wire products are said to be due for upward revision. An advance of $3 on cold finished bars, announced some time ago, goes into effect January 1.

"Price irregularities have not disappeared, though they are limited mainly to reinforcing bars.

Auto Shutdowns.

"Automotive consumption of steel has been adversely affected by holiday suspensions, which have ranged from one day to eight days' duration. January schedules, however, point to a resumption of motor car output on an undiminished scale, with assemblies for the month estimated at 400,000 units.

"Railroad buying continues to expand. The Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe has ordered 58,000 tons of rails. The St. Louis-San Francisco has placed 17,600 tons of 112-lb. rails and necessary accessories with the Ensley mill.

Butter Price Climbs To Highest in 6 Years

The high of 33 cents per pound for December butter deliveries was the highest price that contract has reached at any time since November 7, 1930. Today's close, ⅛ cent below the high, gave December its best closing figure in six years.

Foreign Markets.

By the Associated Press.

London, Dec. 31.—Trading on the stock exchange finished the year today with a confident and firm tone. Activity was fair despite tomorrow's holiday, and general gains in gilt-edged securities were prominent. The closing tone was firm.

Paris—The lowering of the Bank of France's discount rate and the brighter outlook in regard to governmental stability sent all prices higher on the bourse in its last session for the year. Rentes, bank, coal, chemical and metal shares were strong with international issues advancing on better Wall street advices. The closing was steady.

Berlin—Prices declined today after an early short upward trend and closed quiet.

France Lowers Rate as Drain Of Gold Ceases

Laval Victory Aids Bank to Drop Discount From 6% to 5%.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Dec. 31—The Bank of France lowered its discount rate today from six to five per cent.

Premier Pierre Laval's Chamber of Deputies triumphs and the end of the long series of French gold losses caused the bank to cut the discount rate. At the same time the rate of advances on securities was lowered from seven to six per cent.

The heavy burden of high interest rates for industrial and commercial loans, which followed the earlier rise in the discount rate to halt the drain of gold a month ago, caused the bank to lower the rate as soon as it felt conditions warranted.

The rate of advances on gold bars was left unchanged at 7 per cent and 30-day advances at 6 per cent as a precaution against a renewed flight of gold. At the same time a year-end inventory of France's financial status showed losses in almost all major indices.

At the end of 1934 the discount rate was 2½ per cent and the Bank of France had 82,000,000,000 francs (about $5,700,000,000), compared with 66,000,000,000 francs (around $4,600,000,000) today.

Three per cent rentes dropped from 82 to 72 francs, and exports, which were 3,441,000,000 francs (around $240,000,000) for the first 11 months of 1934, were off to 3,157,000,000 francs (about $220,000,000) for 1935.

Wrigley Inaugurates Pensions for Employes

Chicago, Dec. 31 (AP)—The William Wrigley Jr. Co., chewing gum manufacturers, announced today it would establish a pension plan for its more than 1,300 employes. Payment of more than $800,000, the announcement said, to the Aetna Life Insurance Company has been made. Employe-employer contributions would be on a 50-50 basis, it was said.

The plan provides for retirement at the age of 65. The amount of the pension will depend on length of service and average wage.

London Silver Price Higher Than Here

The quotation, posted by Handy & Herman, failed again to take into consideration the advance of 7-16d to 22½d in the London market (U. S. equivalent 49.96 cents), which was posted several hours prior to announcement of the New York price.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively
A Special Correspondent.

Stocks and Bonds Continue Advance in Accelerated Trading; Bonds Firm.

New York, Dec. 31.—Security markets were neglected a little in the last half hour, as Stock Exchange traders gave way to the usual New Year's celebration, but until then the advance in both stocks and bonds was persistent. Last prices were near the best of the day. Turnover was moderately large. Grains, cottons and silver were higher. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent higher at 101½ cents a bushel.

Cash sales in stocks were much less numerous than yesterday, and the market gathered strength as a consequence, as evidently the desire to take profits was not overwhelming in any direction. Oil stocks shared popularity with the airplanes. Most of the oils moved up from a fraction to over a point. Standard Oil (New Jersey) led with a 2-point rise to a new high price for the year. Buoyancy in the aviation group was especially marked in Douglas, Wright and Sperry, the first two being pushed up 5 points each.

Prominent common stocks to advance were Bayuk, Case, Checker Cab, Cudahy, Libbey Owens Glass, Procter & Gamble, and U. S. Gypsum. The following preferred issues jumped 1 to 5 points: Santa Fe, Byers, Real Silk, City Ice, Paramount, Pittsburgh Steel, Mengel, Endicott, Gimbel, Cuban American, and Colorado Fuel.

A Year Ago.

U S Steel	39	47¼	+8¼
Western Union	33½	73¼	+39¾
Westinghouse	37⅝	96¼	+58¼

Cause for Good Feeling.

A glance at stock prices now and at the beginning of the year makes it easy to understand the prevailing bullishness in Wall Street. Industrial stocks, according to the Sun's averages, rose 32 per cent and railroad shares advanced 11 per cent. Bonds were supported by cheap money, and first-grade rails, utilities and industrials made moderate gains. Second-grade rails lost 3 or 4 per cent, partly because of the difficulties into which numerous roads fell, unable to cover charges, and partly because of the drife of money into stocks.

A few stocks made fair gains in number of points. Norfolk & Western was the prize winner, advancing more than 38 points. Great Northern rose nearly 17 points. Several other leading issues managed to add 1 to 8 points to their prices, but on the whole the year brought an increasing realization of the need for a radical change in railroad operation, instead of reliance on an increase in general business.

Some of the most substantial gains in public utility and industrial stocks were made in issues with a high rating. This year was much less a period of speculation in the doubtful stocks than was the previous year. American Telephone, for example, rose 50 points, which was about the rise made by Chrysler. Westinghouse advanced nearly 60 points, and Johns-Manville climbed 40 points. Even U. S. Steel, doing little better than breaking even on its operations, gained 8 points or so on the year.

Smaller Remittances.

The usual year-end transfers home of foreign money, which customarily impart strength to foreign currencies, were in reduced volume. The foreign exchange market nevertheless had the last-day-of-the-year appearance, for several of the gold and gold exchange currencies ran up a few points and were firmer than they are likely to be on January 2. The franc, which has had the most exciting year in its history, finished quietly and firmly. Sterling was almost motionless.

Even the silver market managed to go higher in London for the third time in succession, apparently on covering of short contracts which could not be renewed by reason of absent futures trading facilities. In this market silver was motionless at 49¾ cents for the fifth consecutive time. Money rates here also were unchanged, in spite of heavy year-end disbursements. Excess reserves are far too large for dividend and interest payments, extra holiday cash circulation, debt payments, or bank window dressing to have any noticeable effect on short-term rates. Call money ended the year at three-quarters of 1 per cent, where it has been pegged for some time.

Worry.

"By reducing the total number of accounts from 16,000 to less than 6,000, through the paying off of smaller accounts," continues Mr. Nichols, "a consequent reduction in operating expense has been effected." From the profits in its government bonds (which the bank has made customers agree to accept at par in lieu of cash should it ever lack cash) the bank has written down its building to $10, its vault company to $1 and its Federal Reserve stock to 10 cents. Some stockholders, reading this record of progress, might feel moved to remark that, if the bank sold out the bonds, the building, the vault company and the 10-cent reserve bank stock and got rid of the remaining 5,000 customers, it would have nothing at all to worry about, not even salaries for officials.

New Deal Mathematics.

Seven Congressmen, runs the latest Washington yarn, asked the President to spend $13,000,000 in each of their districts. But, said the Chief Executive, doing some figuring, apparently I have only $28,000,000. But stay; I think I can do it. Seven into 8 is 1; 7 into 21 is 3; $13,000,000. I'll check up; call in the Treasury expert. The latter listed seven thirteens in a row, added the seven 3 digits and made a total of 21, then added seven 1's, making 7 which, added to the 21, made 28. It proved conclusively that the $28,000,000 would provide $13,000,000 each for the seven Congressmen. Now don't say the cart was added before the horse.

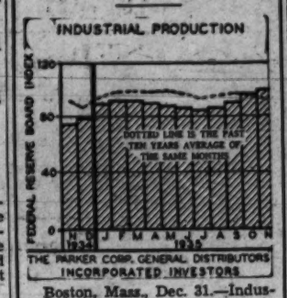
George E. Harris Honored.

In recognition of outstanding work for the past year, George E. Harris was presented with a certificate of merit by the Mutual Benefit Life Insurance Co. at the annual luncheon of the Washington agency at the Shoreham Hotel. In addition to leading the agency both in lives and volume, Mr. Harris has produced at least one application each week for new life insurance during the entire two and a half years that he has been in the business. Certificates of merit also were presented to Raymond L. Bland and Charles M. Schwab. An agency gain in new business of over $300,000 for 1935 was announced by H. Lawrence Choate, C. L. U., the general agent.

A. A. A. Sets December Record.

Climaxing a year of steady gains, the number of motorists joining the District of Columbia division of the American Automobile Association during December broke all previous records for similar months in preceding years, the A. A. A. announced today. "This gain, even over the banner year 1930," a statement issued by the association declared, "unquestionably reflects improved business conditions in Washington and nearby territory as well as an increased determination on the part of motorists to band together under a single banner to protect and further their own rights and interests.

Industry Expands 40 Per Cent From Low



Boston, Mass., Dec. 31.—Industrial production has made definite forward strides. The average industrial production for the past year gained 13½ per cent over 1934, and was 40 per cent greater than 1932, the low year of the depression.

75 Railroads Gain 56% Net in Year

By the Associated Press.

New York, Dec. 31.—Net operating income of the first 75 railroads reporting for November was 56.4 per cent higher than the same month a year ago. The total was $53,271,743 against $34,055,484. Gross income for the same period advanced 16.4 per cent; from $252,626,089 to $294,021,199.

The quickening tempo of industrial activity this year is evident in the 11 months' net operating income reported by these roads. The most substantial gains are noted for the so-called industrial carriers such as New Haven, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Wheeling and Lake Erie, Great Northern. In contrast, the agricultural roads as a group showed the largest losses in net operating income.

Hupp Motor Suspends; Needs New Capital

Detroit, Dec. 31 (AP).—The Hupp Motor Car Corporation suspended operations today, Alex J. Groesbeck, general counsel, announced, pending acquisition of additional working capital.

Groesbeck said the company, one of the oldest automobile concerns here, has more assets and generally is in better shape than a year ago, but that it long has been hampered by lack of cash. He said efforts are being made to borrow from $500,000 to $1,000,000.

Wheat Closes Old Year With Further Rise

Heavy Buying for Export Factor in Market Advance.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Dec. 31.—True to the tradition that around the New Year's beginning higher prices for wheat are to be expected, all wheat markets tended upward today.

Helping to lift values was big export buying of Canadian wheat, estimated as having totaled 3,000,000 bushels in the last 48 hours. Furthermore, it was asserted European continental countries have bought Canadian wheat as far ahead as next May.

Wheat in Chicago closed firm, near to the day's top level, ⅝ to 1 cent above yesterday's finish; May, 101½@101⅝; corn, ¼@⅝ up; May, 60⅞@61; oats at ⅛ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions varying from 20 cents setback to a rise of 2 cents.

Orange Bowl Battle of C. U.-Mississippi Today Is Rated Toss-Up

Capital Team Relying on Carroll

C. U. Has Weight Edge in Line; Lack of Interest Noted.

By Lewis F. Atchison.
A Staff Correspondent.

MIAMI, Fla., Dec. 31.—In a manner akin to that of two bantamweights awaiting the opening bell of a championship prize fight, Catholic University and the University of Mississippi tonight paused on the threshold of a new year and their Orange Bowl football game tomorrow in this Southern playground.

For both teams the fresh, young year apparently has little significance, but they seem to regard this game as a matter of life or death, the key to either gridiron greatness or the athletic bread line.

But the sophisticated folk of Miami took it more complacently, those who took it at all. Tonight the game still is not a sell-out and indications stronger than a carload of Bermuda onions, are that there will be considerably less than a capacity crowd of 15,000 in the little wooden saucer when the opening whistle sounds tomorrow.

Lack of Interest.

A decided lack of interest in the fray was reflected in virtually stagnant wagering on its outcome. The tall, rawboned giants from the corn (dry) and cotton fields of Mississippi are a sentimental if not a financial favorite. Those who have carefully perused the football records for the season, however, are none too quick on the draw with their greenbacks. Catholic has won the respect of Miami's few football fans by its impressive workouts on the field.

"Dutch" Bergman, head coach of the Washington eleven, gives his men an "even chance," verbally, and silently concedes them a one touchdown margin. Coach Ed Walker, of Mississippi, has been moaning about injuries and extremely poor weather conditions and therefore cannot see his squad getting much more than an even break with the Easterners. He, too, has his own private ideas concerning the outcome, but it would take a brain specialist, clairvoyant and dentist to extract them.

Berman intends to rely on the same 11 men who carried the brunt of the burden all season in the big game. The line-up includes Hermie Schmarr and George Milligan at ends; Capt. Ed Karpowich and Ed Clements, tackles; Joe Antonavage and Bill Lajousky, guards; Joe Yanchulis, center; Pete Draginis, quarterback; "Irish" Carroll and Bill Adamaitis, halfbacks, and Bob Makofske, fullback.

"Ole Miss" Line-up.

"Ole Miss" will be represented at the kickoff by Poole and Jackson, ends; Kinard and Dickins, tackles; Breyer and Bilbo, guards; Nelson, center; Bernard, quarterback; Ray Hapes and Rodgers, halfbacks, and Peters, fullback.

Catholic University will have a pronounced weight advantage in the line with the Cardinal forward wall from end to end averaging 197 pounds. It is this line that Bergman is relying upon to halt the Ole Miss running attack and the C. U. coach is reminding his friends that no team during the 1935 season was able to score against C. U. on the ground.

The game evidently will devolve into a battle of brilliant halfbacks, with Ray Hapes lugging the leather for Mississippi, and "Irish" Carroll, Catholic's brilliant sophomore halfback, opposing him. If either one of this pair has a good day it will be well worth the price of admission.

Bergman has coached his line to charge in fast and smear Hapes' interference, without which the little fellow is at a distinct disadvantage. Mississippi's battle plans are similar, but it is doubtful if they will succeed, inasmuch as it will be forced to give the opposition a weight advantage of some 10 pounds per man.

If "Ole Miss'" running game is stopped it will go into the air, with Hapes again the featured artist. The team admittedly is better on the offense. But Catholic has a highly prized aerial attack all its own, should it be needed, with Bill Adamaitis to throw the ball and George Mulligan or Schmarr to snag it.

Rose Bowl Dry Today, Methodist 5-4 Choice

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 31.—The best football news today came from the Weather Bureau when the experts announced tomorrow would bring perfect playing conditions to the Rose Bowl. Oddly enough, the announcement was greeted with cheers by both Southern Methodist University and Stanford.

"Suits us," said Coaches Matty Bell, of S. M. U., and Tiny Thornhill, of Stanford.

The day before, when rain was falling with no sign of cessation, both coaches said their boys would play just as well on a muddy track as a fast one.

The 85,000 persons who will see the annual classic were cheered by the thought that the chance of getting their feet wet was exceedingly remote.

Line-Up Shifts Unlikely.

No last-minute changes in either line-up seemed likely. The Mustangs from Dallas and the Indians from Palo Alto awaited only the zero hour of 2:15 p. m. (5:15 p. m. Eastern standard time) to start firing.

Some of the score of nationally known coaches on hand for the great game thought Bell or Thornhill might try to catch the other off guard by departing somewhat from their established lines of offense and defense. Others thought it much more probable the battle would be waged as forecast. This would see the Indians endeavoring to shake Bobby Grayson loose and passing only infrequently, and the Mustangs reversing the process by throwing many passes to get the Stanford defense back in the hope Bobby Wilson could gallop with abandon.

For the first time all season both teams were at full strength. All doubt that Jim (Monk) Moscrip, sure-footed end of Stanford, would be in the starting line-up, had disappeared and a slight cold did not even slow Bobby Grayson in his final preparations to justify for the last time his election and re-election as an All-American.

From time to time during the year, the Dallas boys have had to go to bat without Iron Man Wetzel at guard, Harry Shuford at full or Johnny Sprague at half, but each was fit tonight.

There was no real football practice on the eve of the game. The players of both casts only went through the motions, getting the feel of the turf of the Rose Bowl.

Last-minute odds continued to favor the Mustangs at approximately 5 to 4. Some moderate wagers were reported giving a few points on the Methodists but most of the betting seemed to be on the result. A few stubborn souls held out for a tie as a win for their side.

The lineups expected to start:

S. Methodist.	Position.	Stanford.
Tipton	L.E.	Moscrip
Spain	L.T.	Reynolds
Wetzer	L.G.	Adams
Johnson	Center	Muller
Stamps	R.G.	Rouble
Orr	R.T.	Beedle
Stewart	R.E.	Topping
Sprague	Q.B.	Pauiman
Wilson	L.H.	Coffis
Burt	R.H.	Hamilton
Shuford	F.B.	Grayson

303 Are Nominated For 1936 Futurity

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, Dec. 31.—Nominations for the 1936 Pimlico Futurity—$15,000 added feature of the Maryland Jockey Club's fall meeting—total 303 in 63 interests.

Daiger also announced that 516 nominations of weanlings in 76 interests had been made for the 1937 futurity and 715 in 64 interests for the 1938 running.

20-19 Say Scorers, 20-20 Say Scribes

Northwestern, Notre Dame Game May Bring Inquiry.

Evanston, Ill., Dec. 31 (AP).—A special investigating committee may have to be appointed to determine whether Northwestern defeated Notre Dame, 20 to 19, or the Wildcats and Irish battled to a 20-to-20 tie, tonight in their annual New Years Eve basketball game.

When the final gun was fired, the scoreboard proclaimed Northwestern the winner, 20 to 19. The official score books kept by the student managers of the teams gave the same version.

However, the books of every sportswriter in the pressbox had it a 20-to-20 tie. The point of difference was that Raymond Meyer, of Chicago, Notre Dame forward, was credited with only one successful free throw attempt in the student managers' tallies, while the writers, to a man, credited him with two.

The excitement of a typical Notre Dame-Northwestern battle was nothing compared to the confusion that followed the frantic checking of score books. Both teams, accepting the scoreboard version, had left the floor. The officials, Lyle Clarno and N. E. Kearns, refused to make a decision, saying it was up to the official scorers.

Smith Victor; Cox in Tie For 9th

Chicagoan Cards 279 at Pasadena; Capital Pro Finishes 74-74.

By the Associated Press.

PASADENA, Calif., Dec. 31.—Horton Smith, ranking golf professional from Chicago, won the annual Pasadena $4,000 Open tournament today with a card of 279 for 72 holes.

The lanky, 27-year-old former Missouri farm boy, adding his third major tournament crown for the year to his collection, toured the final 18 holes in 69, two strokes better than par, after a 71 in the morning round.

Cox Shoots 74—74.

Wiffy Cox, of Washington, D. C., who was only two strokes off the pace after yesterday's play, failed today to continue the golf that made him one of the feared contenders. The lanky Capital pro had to be content with two 74s—sufficient, however, to tie for ninth place with 287. He won $75.

Smith, winner of the Miami-Biltmore Open two weeks ago and of the Palm Springs tournament last February, collected $1,000 for his victory. McSpaden and Cooper split $1,000—$600 for second place and $400 for third. Fourth place was worth $350 to Loos, and Laffoon won $300.

Rose Bowl Boycott Voted; Newsreels Charge Monopoly

By the Associated Press.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 31.—Five major newsreel companies agreed tonight to boycott the Tournament of Roses and Rose Bowl football game, refraining from taking any pictures of the events tomorrow. The action was a reprisal for the sale of exclusive film rights to the game.

Joseph Johnson, of Paramount News, said the newsreels were told they might not release more than 100 feet of film on the game. He said full film rights had been let to Reliable Pictures Co. by Al Masters, graduate manager of Stanford University.

The studio paid $10,000 for the rights, he said.

L. S. U. to Face Christians on Wet Field

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 31.—The Horned Frogs of Texas Christian and the Tigers of Louisiana State—two of the Nation's ranking football teams—were even-money choices tonight on the eve of the second annual Sugar Bowl gridiron classic.

Defeated only once during 1935's hectic season, the Frogs, representing the Southwest Conference, and the Tigers, champions of the Southeastern Conference, were expected to attract close to 35,000 fans for the New Year's Day battle.

Despite inclement weather and a slippery field, a close tussle was in prospect for the holiday crowd, possibly shattering all records for a local sports turnout.

The opposing coaches—Dutch Meyer, of Texas Christian, and Bernie Moore, of Louisiana State—agreed the conflict would be hard-fought and close.

One betting commissioner was offering odds of 5 to 6 and "take your choice." None could be found giving points.

Tex. Christian.	Position.	Louisiana State.
Meyer	L.E.	Tinsley
Eliss	L.T.	Carroll
Harrison	L.G.	Helveston
Lester	Center	Steward
Kellow	R.G.	Brown

Roach	R.E.	Barrett

Officials—Ben Boynton (Dallas); Rosco Minto (Fort Worth); O. W. Severance (Oberlin); R. B. Striegel (Tennessee). Time of game, 1:30 p. m. (C. S. T.).

Little Voted Sullivan Award

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—For his achievement in ruling the world of amateur golf for the second straight year, W. Lawson Little, jr., today was announced the winner of the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy for 1935.

The trophy is awarded annually by the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States on the basis of a Nation-wide ballot of a "tribunal" composed of 600 sports leaders. The holder is recognized as the outstanding American amateur athlete and the individual who "by his performance, example and influence as an amateur and as a man, has done most during the past year to advance the cause of sportsmanship."

Only One Other Golfer.

Little gains a distinction enjoyed by only one other golfer, Robert T. Jones, jr., who was voted the Sullivan Memorial Trophy in 1930, when it was first established as a result of his "grand slam" in British and American competition. The Californian's selection is noteworthy because he was arbitrarily omitted from the list of outstanding performers submitted to the tribunal in 1934 despite his triumph for the first time in both the British and American amateur title tournaments. William R. Bonthron, former Princeton foot racer, captured the trophy last year.

Little topped the 1935 list with a total of 694 points and led his nearest rival, Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, the Wimbledon tennis champion, by a decisive margin. Mrs. Moody, heroine of one of the year's notable come-backs, finished second with 551 points, thus giving California a 1-2 finish in the poll for the first time. The tennis queen has figured prominently in the voting in several previous years, but never before finished so close to the top. Helene Madison, the Seattle swimmer, was runner-up in 1931 and the only other woman athlete to place so high.

Unprecedented Sweep.

Summarizing reasons for Little's selection, the Sullivan Memorial committee, of which Gustavus T. Kirby, of New York, is chairman, stressed not only that the Californian achieved an unprecedented sweep of British-American amateur golf for two years but emphasized his Walker Cup victories, strong character, fighting ability under trying conditions and all-around sportsmanship.

After a preliminary ballot, which brought out 37 nominations for the award, the names of ten finalists

Grid Games Drinking Is General, Drys Say

THE Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church said yesterday in a report that football game drinking was "very general" last season, with the worst conditions noted at Eastern contests.

The board's statement, coming close on the attacks on drinking at college contests made a few days ago in New York by school authorities, said executive means to handle the problem had been taken by many institutions with the best results seen "in certain parts of the Middle West."

The information, gathered from nearly 100 colleges, indicated, the board said, that drinking was "very general and exceedingly obnoxious at some schools and in some sections," according to the Associated Press.

Attitude of Public.

Conditions seemed to be determined, it said, largely by the attitude of the public in the immediate environment, efforts made to discourage drinking, and by the degree of emphasis on football.

The problem is one of "Big Time" football, it pointed out, saying small schools and large institutions with unsuccessful teams were not badly troubled.

Among efforts taken to deal with drinking, the report mentioned use of newspapers to request the spectators to refrain, circular requests mailed by schools along with ticket orders, co-operation of police, ejection of drunken persons and refusal to admit obviously drunken ticketholders.

Character of Population.

Discussing Princeton, the board said difficulties there were undoubtedly increased by the varied character of the New York population and by the moral support given the drinking custom by antiprohibition and antiabstinence propaganda."

In an apparent reference to Dartmouth's "twelfth man," it said "one uncultivated friend intervened in the Princeton-Dartmouth game." On several occasions in the East, said the report, "the ceremony of wrecking the goal posts took the aspects of a dangerous riot; this also occurred at New Orleans."

"Men are not the sole offenders," the board said. "Many ladies join the gentlemen, drinking rather more than their share and proving conclusively that a drunken woman can make a bigger fool of herself than any drunken man."

Cardinal-Dodgers Swap Is Rumored

By the Associated Press

New York, Dec. 31.—The Daily News says that Sam Breadon, owner of the St. Louis Cardinals, is attempting to arrange a "trade" of the St. Louis and Brooklyn National League franchises, bringing the Cards to Brooklyn and sending the Dodgers to St. Louis.

The paper says that Breadon conferred with Ford Frick, National League president, last week, endeavoring to get his support for the plan. The St. Louis owner is ready to give a large amount of cash in addition to the Cardinal franchise in order to move into Brooklyn with his club and its "chain store" adjuncts.

Breadon denied he had such intentions, however, the News adds, quoting him as saying: "If this plan did not go through where would I stand next summer with my Missouri public?" Frick also refused to discuss the matter "in its present nebulous state."

De Foe to Fight Scott at 3 P. M. Today in Postponed Show

Main Battle Stirs Fans' Interest

By Bill McCormick.

THE New Year in boxing will bow in with a new deal at Turner's Arena this afternoon as Johnny De Foe and Howard Scott, a couple of willing featherweights, lock horns for ten rounds in the District's first afternoon fisticuffing fiesta.

The show was to have been the last presented in 1935 and was to have been unreeled last Monday night, but inclement weather forced postponement until today. Activity will start at 3 p. m.

Another innovation will be a part of the card when five or more colored clouters are turned loose in the ring for a battle royal. These hilarious affairs at one time were an important part of every fight card presented hereabouts before the legalization of larrup, but only one has been seen in the ring since Congress made boxing here lawful.

Interest in Main Event.

The main event of today's card, which at first attracted little notice, has been rousing public interest since the postponement. Research into the records of both fighters has indicated that a featherweight battle par excellence is on tap.

De Foe was featherweight champion of New York's Golden Gloves in 1932. Immediately after the tournament he turned professional and today—after a long and carefully planned "experience" campaign—is considered one of the countries outstanding 126-pound prospects.

Numbered among Johnny's most recent performances are draws with Sixto Escobar, bantamweight champion, and Moon Mullins, soon to box Young Rightmiere for the right to contest the featherweight title against Baby Arizmendi.

De Foe also has won from a field which includes Al Roth, Leo Rodak, Frankie Covelli, Dick Welsh, Lew Fox and Al Ragone.

None too impressive in his debut against Eddie Burl here last week because of poor condition, Scott is hopeful of improving against De Foe—and he must do that to go the distance.

Proof of the Texan's real caliber is furnished by his record, which includes a knockout of California Joe Rivers and Carlos Garcia (the first man ever to beat Welterweight Champion Barney Ross), and wins over Tootsie Bashara, Eddie Zivic, Dave Barry and many others.

To provide for those interested in the Orange, Sugar and Rose Bowl football games, it has been arranged to have the progress of those games announced from the ringside.

In a semifinal scheduled for six rounds, Eddie Burl will tangle with Tony Fernandez. In a brace of six-round preliminaries, Billy Landers is slated to swap swats with Sammy Weiss and Cary Wright will meet Eddie Guera.

Alumni Defeats Western, 30-24

Western High yesterday absorbed a lesson in basketball and a 30-24 beating from the Western Alumni at the high school gymnasium. The graduate outfit was composed entirely of last year's Western team which whisked to second place in the inter-high series.

Phil Maloney, All-High guard, now attending Notre Dame, took the scoring honors with 8 points. Bill Brennan, George Washington freshman player, Joe Hanle, Clarence Allan and Bill Page contributed the remaining Alumni points. After taking a 14-10 lead in the first half the Alumni proceeded to widen the margin in the last two periods. Harry Wells led for Western scoring with 7 points.

Bobby Grayson to Wed In Honolulu on Jan. 12

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 31 (AP).—Bobby Grayson, Stanford's all-American fullback, will marry Miss Christine Williams, daughter of Col. Ben Williams, in Honolulu, January 12, with 10 of his teammates as ushers.

The players will sail January 5 to play two football games in Honolulu.

Scalpers Moanin' Low—Prices Drop

By the Associated Press.

Pasadena, Calif., Dec. 31.—The Rose Bowl ticket market crashed today, sending scalpers into a quandary.

A flood of pasteboards glutted the market and prices as high as $100 for $4.40 seats slumped to $7.50 with few takers. Scalpers have been active since the game between Stanford and Southern Methodist was sold out December 9.

"It's them amateurs," complained a veteran ticket speculator, looking for customers in a big hotel.

"Why, I've been workin' this dump for years and I never saw so many guys with tickets."

He declared it appeared that "every guy that made an application got larceny in his heart when he read about picking up 25, 50 and 100 bucks for a ducat."

Near Fist Fight Stirs Parley Of Braves

By the United Press.

BOSTON, Dec. 31.—Verbal bombs burst late today as legal control of the Boston Braves passed to a syndicate headed by J. Robert (Bob) Quinn, former Boston Red Sox owner, after he had retired abruptly from a meeting of majority and minority stockholders of the club, following a near fist fight.

Fireworks developed when an unexpected $250,000 purchase offer was made by Maj. Francis Murphy, Manchester, N. H., shoe magnate, and minority stockholder of the club.

President Quinn turned thumbs down on the offer, then walked out on the meeting after verbal clashes and a threatened fist fight between the Braves' new owner and Patrick J. Ryan, of Somerville, minority stockholder. Ryan had demanded an explanation of the refusal of Murphy's offer.

Called to Gain Support.

The meeting had been convened primarily to rally minority stockholders behind Quinn, who already had the backing of majority interests formerly held by Charles F. Adams, vice president of the Braves, owner of the Boston Bruins, of the National Hockey League, majority stockholder of the Suffolk Downs Race Track and chain store magnate.

Routine of the meeting was interrupted when Samuel Silverman, Boston attorney and associate of Judge Emil E. Fuchs, former president of the Braves, announced he was representing a group of minority stockholders, prominent among them Murphy, and that he would offer $250,000 for the club.

The offer, he said, would take care of outstanding debts and obligations due the National League and would pay notes held by a Boston bank. This plan, Silverman said, would leave $150,000 for rehabilitation of the club, would retain Quinn in his present position and would offer protection to the minority interests.

Denies Holding Option.

Adams denied holding such an option and called upon Quinn to express his attitude toward Silverman's plan and the proposal under which Quinn returned here with the Braves, i. e., controlling interest of the club with Adams' financial backing.

"I passed up three opportunities to come to Boston," Quinn shouted angrily. "I gave up my position in Brooklyn, passed up an offer to go to St. Louis and refused a life job as president of the American Association. I can always get a job."

He explained that when he first came to Boston he talked with Murphy, "who wanted to talk, but didn't want to put up any money. In the plan of reorganization he unfolded to me, he proposed eliminating the minority stockholders."

Quinn then said he planned to continue with the original agreement under which he came here.

Says Quinn Bluffing.

"You are bluffing, Quinn, bluffing."

With order restored, stockholders passed a motion "to authorize the sale or other disposition of all the assets and properties of the company and its liquidation and dissolution."

Johnsen, D. C. Youth, Wins in Doubles

Teams With Weinstein to Score, 7-5, 6-3, in Boys' Championship Play.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Singles form had a 1.000 batting average in the National Junior and Boys' tennis tournaments at the Seventh Regiment today as the favorites in both divisions came through to the final round. It was the first time since the tournament got under way last Thursday that there was a complete absence of upsets.

In the boys' doubles semifinals Malcolm Weinstein, of Philadelphia, and Davey Johnsen, of Washington, defeated Don Buffington, of Atlanta, and Melvin Schwartman, of New York, 7—5, 6—3, while Fishbach and Umstaedter defeated Bellis and Samuel Abelson, of Philadelphia, 6—3, 6—8, 6—2.

The day's play was marked by an unsatisfactory climax to the most exciting match of the day, the one in which Alfred L. Jarvis, of Tenafly, N. J., Williams College freshman, conquered Bob Madden, bespectacled University of Pittsburgh player.

Linesman Says, "Good."

At match point in the 6—3, 5—7, 8—6 encounter Jarvis sliced a backhander down the sideline into the alley and the linesman called the shot a good one. The referee, who was not in position to see where the ball struck, necessarily upheld the decision, although even Jarvis admitted the shot was outside.

The victory qualified Jarvis, runner-up to Gilbert Hunt last year, to meet the top-seeded favorite, Donald Leavens, of Northwestern University, in tomorrow's finals. Leavens had little trouble trouncing Charles Mattman, 6—3, 6—4

Isadore Bellis, Philadelphia, and Joseph Fishbach, New York, proved too strong for their rivals as they marched into the finals of the boys' tourney. Bellis whipped William Umstaedter, Milburn, N. J., 6—0, 6—3. Fishbach won as easily from Alter Milberg, Brooklyn, 6—2, 6—2.

Ex-Champion Takes a Bride

Benny Leonard, retired undefeated lightweight champion of the world, pictured with the former Miss Jacqueline Stern, who is to be his New Year's Day bride. Miss Stern for seven years served as Leonard's secretary in his various enterprises since quitting ring.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

I SEE by the papers that they have awarded Lawson Little the James E. Sullivan Memorial Trophy for 1935 because he is recognized as "the outstanding American amateur athlete who "by his performance, example and influence as an amateur and as a man has done most during the past year to advance the cause of sportsmanship." Methinks he has been forgiven too quickly. Unless memory plays me false, Lawson Little last summer was no shining example of sportsmanship, even though he was winning the National Amateur golf title for the second straight year.

POVICH.

If I remember rightly, and I'm sure the news dispatches of last September 13 will bear me out, Little was something less than a model good sport on the eve of his final match in the National Amateur against Walter Emery, an Oklahoma City lad who was making his first bow in big-time golf. That was the occasion when photographers asked Little to pose for pictures with young Emery, inasmuch as they were to be finalists on the morrow.

That was the occasion, too, when Little, knowing that Emery, who had readily consented to pose, was waiting near the clubhouse, flatly refused to appear. Little failed not only to oblige the photographers but embarrassed Emery no end. Emery, with no claims to being a model good sport, openly charged that Little high-hatted him, and to the reporters on the scene it was apparent. And Little is the man they give the 1935 award for sportsmanship. Nuts!

That performance, more than sportsmanship, governs the award of the Sullivan medal is apparent. Second in the 1935 ranking is Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, who, no longer than three summers ago, was roundly accused of rare bad sportsmanship when she walked off the court in the national women's tennis finals against Helen Jacobs and forfeited instead of taking her beating like a good sport. Mrs. Moody doubtless was injured, as she had claimed, but she might have permitted the girl whom she had beaten so often the full sweetness of revenge simply by staying on the court and driving the ball into the net.

DESPITE the seeming lack of activity at Griffith Stadium, where Clark Griffith is supposed to have abandoned all hope of strengthening his club by trades, there is more than an undercurrent of belief that the Washington team will open the 1936 season with a new first-string catcher.

The catching object of Bucky Harris' affections continues to be Frankie Pytlak, the little dynamo who does the backstopping for the Cleveland Indians when he is physically fit. It was at Harris' urging that Griffith first broached to the Indians the subject of a Pytlak-Bolton swap.

Harris reckons, and perhaps rightly, that all of the shortcomings of the Washington pitching staff were not due directly to the shortcomings of the pitchers. As a receiver and handler of hurlers, nobody ever accused Bolton of being in the top flight among catchers and, with his staff still shaky, Harris is intent on affording it, at least, the best catching obtainable.

Bolton's big bat represents, of course, a valuable attacking adjunct for any team, but Harris is willing to risk the absence of the stocky catcher's hitting power in an attempt to give his pitchers better protection. He visions Pytlak as the answer to much of his pitching problem and, with the Indians having expressed a willingness to trade, the deal is not yet cold despite the seeming stalemate.

Bolton's hitting, with the nearby right-field fence in Cleveland to shoot at, would doubtless be a mighty factor if the Indians accept the trade. But Cleveland also is holding out for an outfielder, and any Pytlak-Bolton trade would thus necessarily involve an additional Washington player. Neither club can afford to stand pat and an announcement of a Washington-Cleveland trade in the near future would be no complete surprise.

McAlwee, Less Atrocious Than Fellow Scribes, Wins Pin Event

A NUMBER of duckpins and the nerves of some good bowlers who looked on were upset every now and then yesterday as Washington sports writers indulged in their annual bowling tournament at Lucky Strike Alleys. Ben McAlvee, bowling reporter for the Herald, imprinted his name among those of other champions of the event by winning it with a gross pinnage of 590.

McAlee's bowling was less atrocious than his rivals, for the floridfaced alley expert knocked off high net score of 585 as well as high gross. His handicap was 25. Avener Bealls, who takes sports picture for the Times, shot a net of 564 and also was second in the gross totals with 584. Both McAlwee and Maury Fitzgerald, of the Herald, who finished third, once before gained sports fame by winning the Cleland Cup, in the sports writers' golf tournament.

Francis Stan, of the Star, was threatened with disqualification for using bowling shoes, and Shirley Povich, Post sports editor, for using a 50 handicap. Bob Considine, for many years an unsuccessful contender for the championship, was unable to inflict his presence on the management due to a mild case of sunburn—or something.

East's Eleven 2-1 Choice On Coast

60,000 Expected to See Nation's Stars Battle in Charity Game.

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 31.—East and West meet on the football field here tomorrow in the eleventh intersectional game played for charity—one that will see the Eastern forces line up as 2-to-1 favorites.

Stars of the Nation's college gridirons in 1935 man the two squads. The 44 players, evenly distributed, with the Mississippi River as the dividing line, represent 43 cities and 31 universities and colleges.

Nine Team Captains.

In this respect, the Eastern squad, coached by Andy Kerr, of Colgate, and Dick Hanley, formerly of Northwestern, has a decided edge. Among the 22 luminaries recruited from the East, Middle West and Old South are nine team captains and five men who rated distinction of all-American rating.

Probable line-ups:

East.	Position.	West.
Antonini, Ind.	L. E.	Scherer, Nebr.
R. Smith, Minn.	L. T.	Lutz, Calif.
Oech, Minn.	L. G.	Carter, Oregon

FEATURING a tennis match between Dooley Mitchell and Bud Markey, two of the District's foremost netmen, the Y. M. C. A.'s annual New Year's Day open house sports carnival will swing into action today.

Mitchell, for years the District's top-ranking player, and Markey, former Notre Dame tennis captain, will play the feature role which last year was performed by Barney Welsh, National Public Parks champion, and Tony Latona, then No. 2 ranking player of the District. Mitchell is now the No. 3 ranking player, Markey was ranked at No. 4.

The tennis match, to be played in the men's gymnasium at 5 p. m., will be the highlight of a rapid succession of events occupying the men's and boys' gyms, swimming pools, handball and squash courts. Basketball, handball, volley ball and other sports will comprise the program.

A 2-mile indoor championship run will start off the events at 2 p. m. An indoor baseball game between the Y. M. C. A. and the city championship American Legion Victory Post team will take over the gym at 2:15. The Washington "Y" basketbal team will meet the Baltimore "Y" at 4 and at 5 p. m. comes the tennis match. Poop Deck Wins At New Orleans

By the Associated Press.

New Orleans, Dec. 31.—Poop Deck, a heavily campaigned son of Constitution from A. J. Halliwell Stable, whipped a field of cheap platers in the mile-and-70-yard claiming event, which topped the Fair Grounds card today.

Felawake set the pace from the rise of the barrier, but in the stretch drive F. Polk brought Poop Deck up fast to score by a neck.

Felawake, weakening in the final test, dropped back to third place as Pomposo closed fast to take the place in the close finish.

2 World Swim Records Fall In Florida

Kiefer and Erna Kompa Set Marks; 5 American Times Bettered.

By the Associated Press.

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Dec. 31. Two world and five American swimming marks fell today, final day of the fourth annual three-day Miami Biltmore meet, with young Adolph Kiefer, of Chicago, and Erna Kompa, of New York's famed Kompa sisters, sharing honors.

A backstroke duel over 100 meters between the 17-year-old Kiefer, who has snapped virtually every record since he entered competition last fall, and Albert Vande Weghe, of Newark, saw the former pull ahead in the stretch to win by three lengths and shatter his own world mark.

Swimming easily as Vande-Weghe thrashed alongside him, Kiefer was clocked in 1:05.6 for the 100-meter long course, well under the time of 1:07.8 he set at Detroit last July.

Scores Other Five.

Miss Kompa, another comparative newcomer to top-flight swimming, accounted for the other five record-time performances of the day as she swept effortlessly along over the 440-yard course. One record she improved was her own 400-meter world mark. Two others, national records, were the property of Eleanor Holm Jarrett, while three American marks Miss Kompa held.

Over 200 yards, Miss Kompa was clocked at 2:38.4; over 300 meters, 4:31; over 400 yards, 5:33.3; over 400 meters, 6:07.5; over 440 yards, 6:07.5. National records for the distances were, respectively, 2:37, 4:25.4, 5:29.6, 6:04.8 and 6:04.8 Miss Kompa's old world record time for the 400 meters was the same as her national record.

Mrs. Jarrett set the previous 200-yard record in July, 1932, at Rye, N. Y. Her 300-meter mark was made in February, 1935, at Chicago. Miss Kompa set all her records at Rochester, N. Y., this year.

In three other events of the closing day, records failed to fall. Miss Elsie Ferrill, of the N. Y. W. S. A., led home two teammates, Mavis Freeman and Colores Smith, in a 100-yard free style race, her time, 1:05.8. Leonard Spence, New York, tried, but failed by 4 seconds, to better the 100-meter back stroke Mark. Lenore Kight Wingard, Concinnati, defeated Dorothea Dickinson, New York, by 6 lengths at 250 yards, free style, her time, 3:01.4.

Knebelkamp, 65, Dead; Owned Louisville Club

Louisville, Ky., Dec. 31 (AP).—William F. Knebelkamp, 65, president of the Louisville American Association Baseball Club, died today at his Harrods Creek home of heart complications.

In addition to control of the ball club, he raced a thoroughbred stable known as Winona Farm and also owned large holdings in the American Medicinal Spirits, Inc.

Picks Stanford To Win in Bowl By 19-14 Score.

By Paul Gallico.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—You can't give an old trick new dogs. Or maybe it's teach an old dog new tricks. The year is fading. So am I. But I'm going to see the old year out on the old lines if it kills me—and you, too. I am going to pick Stanford to beat Southern Methodist in the Rose Bowl tomorrow afternoon and on the usual hunch. And justify the hunch by my usual methods. And eat the same dish of crow the day after. But that's the way I am, and it's too late to change. Everybody expects Southern Methodist to win. They've played the harder schedule, are more versatile, seem to have better all-around football players. That is, everybody except deponent, who is going back to his old friend law of averages. There's the toughest guy in the whole sports world to lick. This is the third trip into the Rose Bowl for that particular Stanford team. They're bound to win one of them. This is the one.

Columbia beat them in one of the weirdest games ever played. Alabama passed them to death with one of the greatest forward passing batteries of the year. Dixie Howell to Hutson. Southern Methodist is going to the Rose Bowl, I think, with even a better all-around team than Alabama was last year. But that is the team that Stanford is finally going to beat. If ever a team is due to play an hour of half-hysterical, anything-to-win football, it is that Stanford team. For this is the last game it will play as a unit. Eight of the team members are graduating. They ought to feel like taking a Rose Bowl victory with them when they go.

For one thing, they will trot onto the emerald green turf in the big Pasadena Stadium with a little humility in their hearts—not too much, but just a little. It's a good way to begin any considerable undertaking. There was none present the year Columbia went out there. Stanford was so cocky and sure of an easy victory against Columbia that when it met with resistance and then was scored upon the shock was too great.

YOU will remember that in spite of all the lucky breaks that Columbia got, and the breaks that went against Stanford, that Stanford did have the ball on about Columbia's 5-yard line with a first down and four tries to punch it over, and couldn't score.

I don't know how cocky Stanford was against Alabama, but I do know that the Coast team didn't have much of a pass defense. I hope it has one now, because it isn't exactly healthy not to have a pass defense against those Texas teams. But I'll bet it won't be over confident. If anything it will be a little the under dog. It will be hoping for victory, not wondering how big a score it will run up. The Californians had better hope for victory because that Southern Methodist team will be functioning 40 per cent better than it did when I saw it against Texas Christian. Shuford is back, and Big Spain, the tackle, is in shape again.

Savoldi, 4th on Popularity List, Returns to Capital Mat

By George Considine.

A COUPLE of guys named Joe—Savoldi and Cox—will commit a mess of mayhem tomorrow night at the Turner Arena, probably to the delight of Washington's army of wrestling addicts. The fact that Signor Savoldi stands fourth in the country and second only to Champion O'Mahony locally in popularity proves conclusively that he has the ability to delight.

According to Leon Balkin, national wrestling booking agent, the order of the five most popular workmen from a standpoint of gate receipts for 1935 are in order: Danno O'Mahony, Ed (Don) George, Man Mountain Dean, Joe Savoldi and George Zaharias. Jim Londos' retirement after he lost the title to O'Mahony barred him from consideration.

Easily the greatest athlete in the wrestling game, Savoldi was born in Three Oaks, Mich., 27 years ago, is 6 feet tall and weighs 208 pounds. In high school he excelled in football, baseball, track and boxing. He created such a furore that he aroused the interest of Knute Rockne and was awarded a scholarship at Notre Dame. At the close of the 1930 season Rockne referred to Savoldi as the greatest full back of all time.

Savoldi had wrestled only a few months when he knocked the tar out of Jim Londos, then champion o fthe world. "Whoever heard of a world champion getting licked by a novice?" the Illinois State Athletic Commission asked itself. Convinced that nobody ever heard of such a thing, the I. S. A. C. disqualified Savoldi and gave Jeems back his crown.

Richly bred in the finer side of sports, Savoldi has time and again forgotten his position and made a laughing stock out of the various world rassle champions. Just last summer at Griffith Stadium when he was working with Danno O'Mahony before the largest house of the year, he thumped the Irisher all over the infield. Of course, he was disqualified.

Ring Out The Old!

Ring out the old in fact as well as in spirit. In your home are outgrown, unused toys, furniture and other such articles that can be easily sold for cash. Mrs. L. B. Harrison, of 6249 30th street northwest, had a bicycle which her son had outgrown. She advertised it for sale in The Post. The first morning her ad appeared, a Post reader in Virginia phoned Mrs. Harrison at 8 a. m. begging her (yes, he actually pleaded with her) to reserve the bicycle till he could come and see it. He bought it the same day.

Vote Boy, $18.50 Shot, Wins by Neck

Second Place Is Taken by Airline

By the Associated Press.

TROPICAL PARK, Fla., Dec. 31. Form players who took advantage of their final opportunity to get even for the year on the horses met with a stunning setback in the fourth race, 6-furlong feature offering on the program here today. A bad start saw the recent winner and favorite, Jake Blieden, last away, while Wizard, a Texas tip, broke next to last, also with scant chance.

The winner turned up in Vote Boy, a gelding that has been running in distance races for Owner T. F. Swords. Apprentice Clayton Phillips drove the $18.50-for-2 shot to a neck victory in 111 3-5. W. Watersan's Airline beat Wizard by three lengths for the place. Jake Blieden was nosed out of the picture.

The first two horses away from the gate were the first two home. Airline skipped away on top but was outrun by Vote Boy. The pair had the race between them throughout the running, with Airline threatening the tired Vote Boy in the final sixteenth. Wizard was slower than Jake Blieden to find his stride, but nipped that fellow right on the wire for the short end of the purse.

Double Returns $34.20.

Sangal and Lum Joy, victorious in the first and third races respectively, combined to pay a daily double of $34.20 for $2.

The Mrs. Ed Haughton entry of Shot Proof and Dancing Cloud made a show of the field in the mile and a sixteenth of the fifth contest. Shot Proof opened up a commanding lead and galloped home by five lengths with Jockey Red Pollard sitting still. Dancing Cloud held the others safe, beating Gallant Miss by two lengths for the place. By running one, two, the winning entry paid $7 straight and $7.80 place as the public choice.

In a finish that only the judges could decide, Languorous got up to nose out Love Lost in the sixth, giving Jockey Watson a double.

Tropical Park, Dec. 31.

Dear Al:

Bennings, Inc., finished the old year by setting a record for Bennings, Inc. Fourteen straight losers have been passed along. Looks as if I were working with the bookies. Today was like the day before. The Bennings selections were crowding the money in most races, but, for some reason or another, lacked the necessary punch. Three were as close as second, but they were offset by two lasts. However, that happened last year. Clocker Mike, Trainer Joe and myself resolved tonight to pick bigger and better winners throughout 1936. Tomorrow is the birthday for all the horses. One of the largest week-day crowds of the meeting turned out today and track officials have made plans to be hosts to some 15,000 tomorrow. At the rate attendance and betting has increased in the last week Hialeah Park, opening on January 16, should have its best season. Happy New Year to all.

BILL.

First race—Bocasette, a recent winner at a mile, picks up 7 additional pounds and is asked to vie at 6 furlongs. I believe the Upset gelding can handle Dornoch and Merovech, which probably will draw the chief play. Mike favors Appomattox.

Second race—El Contento, Peerless Pal and Jack Sting is the way I prefer them in this sprint. This is the first race of the new year for the crop of 3-year-olds and is a wide open race.

Third race—M. J. Brennan is the most consistent of these sprinters and will bring us an honest effort. A good ride should find us cashing. Vanda Cerula closed like the wind last out and is dangerous under proper handling. Crowned Head may surprise.

Fourth race—Highest Point gets a nice shift in the weights from the leading contenders in this field and I'm going to try to make him do some important running. Prince Drake and Kawagoe to take care of the others.

Fifth Race.—Joan D. gets in light and has defeated company of this caliber. The surprise of the race may be Hi-Well. This one showed a stretch punch last out and drops many pounds. Hymn for the show.

Sixth race—Lynx Eye has little to recommend him in the early running, but he is a powerful stretch horse and I believe one of the come-from-behind type will take this purse. Strange as it may seem, I'm putting Galmica, with a 95-pound assignment, second. Stand Pat is the figure horse.

Seventh race—Motley closed a gap last out and off that effort should improve enough to hold these safe. Joe Renick, the money jockey, will be in the saddle. Blessed Again and Taunton for the other awards.

BIG RED should improve over this effort.

LANGUOROUS was away slowly, but worked her way up and just got up to win in last stride. LOVE LOST ran into lead in stretch and made a game effort. DORIS B. closed a big gap. SLEEK tired suddenly in last sixteenth. BELLE FILLE ran a fair race. FOREIGN LADY stopped badly.

The Mustangs were pretty well banged up when they went in against Texas Christian. They have had a month to recover and build up again.

There is no telling what Southern Methodist will spring. It is famous as a great passing team, but it came up here last year and licked Fordham and threw only two passes. That was practically the same team that will be in the Rose Bowl and which, like Stanford, is a senior team playing its last game. Against Texas Christian it showed both running attack and a passing game. It is the toughest kind of a team to handle, because if you spread to stop passes that Bobby Wilson will run you ragged.

THERE is only one question it must answer—can it take the pounding of a heavy, fast-charging line and stop a high-geared ground attack itself? The Texas linemen are more used to pulling out and smearing passes than charging through and piling up interference and ball carriers. Obviously the team that can dictate the style of play early in the game will be the winner.
